

Pop queen dedicates song to anti-drug drive

VIJAY SHANKER | MUMBAI

Mumbai-based pop queen Saru Maini has dedicated her song Kaun Kehta Hai Zindagi Main Gum Nahi to the World Drug Day, on June 26.

While recording at the Geet Studio in Andheri, Saru said, "As a singer, I feel I have a social responsibility. In order to promote the anti-drug drive, I have dedicated this song which has the message that there are always going to be problems in life, but one should have a positive outlook to be able to achieve success and happiness. Taking to drugs is not the solution as once you try it, you get addicted. Hence, say no to drugs."

Saru Maini has a few albums to her credit, but it is Ishq Hua that brought her popularity. She feels that as a singer, if she can be associated with a social cause, then her life as an artiste will be complete. She says, she called up music director Jatin Sharma and he instantly agreed. The lyrics have been penned by Umang and the video will be shot by Shivraj.

Interestingly, Saru is a qualified lawyer, but music is her first love. She developed a passion for singing at a tender age and says that it is the right time to devote herself to music completely.

The young singer is quite excited about the duet she has just recorded with Sonu Nigam for the film Anthony Kaun Hai and is looking forward to a successful career.
