Item 6 of the provisional agenda*

Work of the Centre for International Crime PreventionActivities of the institutes comprising the United Nations
Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network*Report of the Secretary-GeneralSummary*

The present report was prepared by the Secretary-General pursuant to Economic and Social Council resolutions 1992/22, section IV, of 30 July 1992, 1994/21 of 25 July 1994 and 1999/23 of 28 July 1999, in which the Council requested the Secretary-General to coordinate and integrate the activities of the interregional, regional and associate institutes cooperating with the United Nations in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. It highlights the research and technical assistance activities carried out in 1999 and 2000 by the United Nations interregional crime and justice research institutes, the affiliated regional institutes and the associate institutes and centres, all of which comprise the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network. It also provides information on the activities of the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council.

I. Introduction

1. The present report has been prepared in accordance with Economic and Social Council resolutions 1992/22, section IV, of 30 July 1992, 1994/21 of 25 July 1994 and 1999/23 of 28 July 1999, with a view to facilitating the worldwide coordination of activities related to crime prevention and criminal justice. The report is based on contributions received from the institutes and centres concerned and on the report of the Fifteenth Joint Programme Coordination Meeting of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme Network, held in Turin and Courmayeur, Italy, on 20 and 21 September 2000.

2. Joint work between the Centre for International Crime Prevention of the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention of the Secretariat and the Criminal Justice Programme network, in the framework of the existing mandates of the institutes, is of considerable importance in the pursuit of the global agenda in crime prevention and criminal justice. Close cooperation between the Centre and the institutes leads to the successful outcome of the workshops held within the framework of the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders held in Vienna from 10 to 17 April 2000.¹ The Centre for International Crime Prevention attended the coordination meeting of the network in Courmayeur, Italy. Bilaterally, the Centre reached agreements with several of the network members on collaborative activities, most notably with the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute (UNICRI) in the framework of the global programme against transnational organized crime, the global programme against trafficking in persons and the global programme against corruption, and with the Australian Institute of Criminology in a research project in the Philippines. The National Institute of Justice also takes part in the global study on organized crime coordinated by the Centre for International Crime Prevention. The report describes other instances of collaboration between the Centre network entities in research and operational activities. It is expected that such cooperation will be increased on the basis of specific agreements.

II. Activities of the United Nations Interregional Crime and Justice Research Institute

3. Since the majority of UNICRI activities combine research, meetings and publications, the present report is organized around the major topics arising from those activities.

A. Coordination with the Centre for International Crime Prevention and the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and with other institutes of the Programme network

4. UNICRI participated in the eighth and ninth sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and organized and co-hosted with the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council (ISPAC) the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Coordination Meetings held in Milan, Italy on 18 November 1999, in Turin, Italy on 20 September and in Courmayeur, Italy on 21 September 2000. On the occasion of the Tenth Congress, UNICRI organized, in cooperation with ISPAC, a workshop on combating corruption which was held from 10 to 11 April 2000, jointly with the European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations, the Australian Institute of Criminology, the Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, the National Institute of Justice of the United States of America and the International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy, UNICRI participated in the organization of a workshop on women in criminal justice on 12 and 13 April 2000 and served as rapporteur for the topic entitled "Effective crime prevention: keeping pace with new developments".

B. Global programme against trafficking in persons

5. The Programme is being carried out in cooperation with the Centre for International Crime Prevention.

1. Research

6. Several projects started in 1999-2000, concerning coalitions against trafficking in human beings in the Philippines (also in cooperation with the Australian Institute of Criminology); trafficking in human beings in Benin, Nigeria and Togo; criminal justice responses to trafficking in human beings in the Czech Republic and Poland; and capacity-building in Brazil on trafficking in human beings. In each project, UNICRI is entrusted with the development of the research and assessment instruments and the supervision and coordination of assessment activities.

2. Meetings

7. An international conference entitled "New frontiers of crime: trafficking in human beings and new forms of slavery" was held in Verona, Italy in October 1999. Within the framework of the High-level Political Signing Conference for the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime held in Palermo, Italy from 12 to 15 December 2000, UNICRI organized jointly with the Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and ISPAC the Forum for Global Action against Trafficking in Persons held in Catania, Italy, in December 2000. Several project missions have been undertaken jointly with the Centre for International Crime Prevention.

C. Global programme against corruption

8. The global programme against corruption is being carried out in cooperation with the Centre for International Crime Prevention.

1. Research

9. Two country projects began in 1999-2000 concerning the assessment of corruption in Hungary, and support to the national anti-corruption strategy in Lebanon. In both projects, UNICRI is entrusted with the research and assessment component. UNICRI subcontracted and supervised the carrying out of country assessments in Hungary and Lebanon.

2. Meetings

10. A joint international conference involving UNICRI and ISPAC on "Responding to the challenges of corruption", was held in Milan, Italy on 19 and 20 November 1999. Several project missions have been undertaken jointly with the Centre for International Crime Prevention.

3. Publications

11. Responding to the Challenges of Corruption (UNICRI publication No. 63, 2000) was published during the reporting period.

D. Global study on illegal drug markets

Research

12. Reports were collected from 18 cities; consultations were organized in collaboration with the United Nations International Drug Control Programme or the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) local offices; and an overall comparative report is to be finalized in 2001.

E. International crime victim survey

1. Research

13. Fully-fledged surveys were undertaken in 15 countries of central and eastern Europe and 7 developing countries (2000).

2. Meetings

14. Special sessions were held on the international crime victim survey at the X International Symposium on Victimology (Montreal, Canada, August 2000); there were round tables and seminars on the international crime victim survey in five countries of central and eastern Europe (2000); and there were a number of coordination meetings for the International Working Group (1999-2000).

3. Publications

15. Surveying Crime: A Global Perspective (ISTAT/UNICRI 2000) was published as well as several articles and reports on the issues mentioned above.

F. International crime business survey

Research

16. Development of the survey instrument and fully-fledged surveys in nine countries in central and eastern Europe were carried out in 2000.

G. Juvenile justice

1. Research

17. A project is in place on the involvement of Italian and foreign minors in drug abuse and illicit trafficking and their exploitation by criminal organizations. Preparations for a project on the programme of assistance in strengthening the children and youth's rights in Angola are under way and will be undertaken in 2001-2002.

2. Meetings

18. A number of meetings with consultants and local experts at UNICRI have been held.

H. World Organized Crime Report

Meetings

19. The first preparatory meeting for the World Organized Crime Report was held at UNICRI in September 2000. It was the first meeting held at the new premises of the Institute in Turin, Italy, and served as a first opportunity for the participation of local experts and practitioners.

III. Activities of the affiliated regional institutes

A. Asia and Far East Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

1. Training courses and seminars

20. The training activities of the Asia and Far East Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders in the reporting period included the following:

(a) Group training courses. Between 1 January 1999 and 31 December 2000, the Asia and Far East Institute held six group training courses: the 111th international seminar, from January to February 1999, entitled "The role of police, prosecution and the judiciary in the changing society"; the 112th international training course, from April to July 1999, entitled "Participation of the public and victims for more fair and effective criminal justice administration"; the 113th international training course, from August to November 1999, entitled "The effective administration of criminal justice for the prevention of corrupt activities by public officials"; the 114th international seminar, from January to February 2000, on the theme "International cooperation to combat transnational organized crime—with special emphasis on mutual legal assistance and extradition"; the 115th international training course, from May to July 2000, on the theme "Current issues in correctional treatment and effective countermeasures"; and the 116th international training course, from August to November 2000, entitled "Effective methods to combat transnational organized crime in criminal justice processes". The training courses and seminars were attended by 156 participants representing 39 countries from Africa, Asia, eastern Europe, Latin America and the Pacific region. The Institute has been placing special emphasis on transnational organized crime since the 113th International Training Course, paying utmost attention to the priority themes identified by the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice;

(b) The fourth special training course on corruption control in criminal justice. The Asia and Far East Institute held the fourth special training course entitled "Corruption control in criminal justice" in November 2000. In that course, 13 foreign officials who were engaged in corruption control made comparative analyses of the current situation with regard to corruption, methods of corruption prevention and measures to enhance international cooperation;

(c) The first special training programme for Kenya on juvenile delinquent treatment systems. The Asia and Far East Institute held the first special training programme for nine criminal justice officials from Kenya involved in the prevention of delinquency and the treatment of juvenile delinquents. The course, entitled "Juvenile delinquent treatment systems", was held in October 2000. The officials were exposed to the workings of the juvenile justice and treatment systems in Japan through lectures and observation visits to relevant agencies;

(d) The fourth and fifth special seminars for senior criminal justice officials of China. The Asia and Far East Institute held two special seminars for senior criminal justice officials of China entitled “Rational structure of criminal justice and the relationship between the different agencies of criminal justice” in March 1999, and “Participation of the public and victims in criminal justice administration” in February to March 2000. In each seminar, 10 senior criminal justice officials and the Institute faculty discussed and compared contemporary problems faced by China and Japan in relation to the main themes.

2. Workshop on crimes related to the computer network

21. Within the framework of the Tenth Congress, the Asia and Far East Institute organized a workshop on crimes related to the computer network. In preparation, the Institute hosted two expert meetings entitled “Crimes related to the computer network” in October 1998 and 1999.

3. Research and publications

22. The Asia and Far East Institute issued publications, entitled Adult Probation Profiles of Asia in 1999 and Institutional Treatment Profiles of Asia in 2000. In addition, the Institute published a volume entitled Crimes Related to the Computer Network—Challenges of the Twenty-first Century as a reference source for the Tenth Congress workshop on that issue. Between 1999 and 2000, the Asia and Far East Institute issued the 54th and 55th editions of the series entitled Resource Material, which contained contributions by visiting experts and participants in the courses and seminars of the Institute.

4. Technical cooperation

23. The Asia and Far East Institute organized the following activities:

(a) Joint seminars. The Asia and Far East Institute held a joint seminar with Thailand in December 1999, with the main theme of “Community and victim involvement in criminal justice administration”. In December 2000, the Institute held a joint seminar with Nepal, with the main theme of “Effective countermeasures to combat organized crime in criminal justice processes”;

(b) Regional training programmes

(i) Thailand. The Asia and Far East Institute dispatched professors to Thailand to assist the Office of the Narcotics Control Board in organizing the seventh and eighth regional training courses on effective countermeasures against drug offences and the advancement of criminal justice administration in January 1999 and 2000;

(ii) Costa Rica. The Institute dispatched professors to Costa Rica to attend the first and second regional seminars on effective measures for the improvement of prison conditions and correctional programmes, which were organized and hosted by the Government of Costa Rica through the United Nations Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders in August 1999 and July 2000.

5. Others

24. The Asia and Far East Institute dispatched professors to Kenya to assist the Children’s Department of the Ministry of Home Affairs and National Heritage in 1999 and 2000, in a project to develop nationwide standards for the treatment of juvenile offenders.

B. Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

25. In the reporting period, the Latin American Institute focused its efforts on the topics below, which included research, technical assistance, training and publications at the regional and national levels. Related publications were displayed at the Tenth Congress.

1. Cooperation with the Centre for International Crime Prevention within the framework of the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

26. The Latin American Institute collaborated with the Centre for International Crime Prevention and the Government of Costa Rica in the organization, hosting and substantive servicing of the Latin American and Caribbean Regional Preparatory Meeting for the Tenth Congress, held in San José, from 22 to 24 February 1999.

2. Juvenile justice

27. The Latin American Institute has continued to encourage the legal analysis of the legislation currently in force in each country of the region concerning minor offenders and their level of adjustment to the provisions of the Convention on the Rights of the Child and other related instruments. It has also proposed pertinent reforms to juvenile justice by conducting various projects in the region involving the organization of seminars and training activities, as follows:

(a) Research and technical assistance. Penal and alternative punishment for juveniles in Costa Rica (1999); imprisoned children and adolescents, with a special focus on their legal status and on the phenomenon of the increase of such populations in Central America, Argentina, Ecuador and Mexico (2000); study on the current situation of children and adolescents living with their parents in custody in the prisons of Ecuador (1999); legal and sociological assessment of the status of the juvenile justice systems and analysis of the legislation and its adjustment to the Convention on the Rights of the Child in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela (2000); study and analysis of the status of national and local juvenile justice in Buenos Aires (2000); research on criminal responsibility of adolescents under the new Children and Adolescents Code of Bolivia (2000); comparative analysis of the merits, procedural and penalty application guarantees, with respect to Latin American legislation on the criminal liability of minors (2000);

(b) Meetings and advisory services. The projects mentioned above included more than 20 national and regional seminars and advisory services on juvenile justice and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child that were delivered in Bogotá and Medellín, Colombia in 1999; Cochabamba, Bolivia in 2000; Buenos Aires in 2000; Brasília in 2000; Caracas and Mérida, Venezuela in 2000; Santa Cruz, Bolivia in 2000; Rancagua and Santiago, Chile in 2000; Arequipa, Lima, Piura and Trujillo, Peru in 2000. A regional conference on juvenile justice in the Southern Cone and Andean group countries was held in Buenos Aires in 2000. A training programme on juvenile justice for police officials of Panama and a training programme on theory and doctrine of juvenile penal justice for judges of Bolivia began during 1999-2000.

3. Penitentiary systems and alternatives to imprisonment

28. The Latin American Institute has continued to address the problem of overcrowding in prisons, in particular, the efforts that are intended to reduce the inmate population in the countries of the region through legal assistance, strengthening of the powers of the sentencing judge and the promotion of alternatives to imprisonment. The compilation and analysis of basic statistical information were also important endeavours during the period under review. Highlights include the following:

(a) Research. A study on the criminal justice system and human rights: the challenge of overcrowding in prisons included contributions from Argentina, Belize, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Guyana, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Saint Kitts and Nevis, Saint Lucia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, Suriname and Trinidad and Tobago (2000);

(b) Training. The regional training programme on living conditions in prisons and its programmes for Latin America and the Caribbean (1999-2003) were implemented by the Latin American Institute in close collaboration with the Asia and Far East Institute. Eighteen officials from Mexico and Central America attended the first course, held in July 1999. The second course was attended by 17 officials from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, Paraguay, Venezuela and Uruguay in July 2000.

4. Public defence

29. As a result of the public defence training and technical assistance programme of the Latin American Institute, more than 2,000 prisoners were released in Ecuador in 1999. It is planned to extend the programme to Honduras.

5. Crime prevention and control

30. The crime prevention and control programme is intended to contribute to the development of broader strategies on the prevention of crime from the perspective of human security:

(a) Research. In December 1999, a comparative study entitled Crime and Security of the Inhabitants was concluded in eight countries in Latin America: Argentina, Belize, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico and Nicaragua;

(b) Meetings. Jointly with the International Centre for criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy, the United Nations Latin American Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders conducted a hemispheric seminar on the theme of drugs and human security, held in Costa Rica in March 1999, with the attendance of more than 90 government experts and officials, to discuss the phenomenon and draw up action guidelines.

6. Women in the criminal justice system

31. The Latin American Institute continued implementing its women, gender and justice programme to enhance the eradication of any type of discrimination against women in the criminal justice administration system. Some of the activities undertaken by the Institute include the following:

(a) Research. Assessment of the inter-generic relations in law schools and the incorporation of a gender perspective in the instruction of law in law schools involving Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama (1999-2000); assessment of the legal formation programmes of schools and judicial training units of judicial systems and the incorporation of a gender perspective based on juridical phenomenon analysis, involving Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Panama (1999-2000); jointly with the International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy, the Latin American Institute conducted a survey reviewing the progress made in the implementation of the Convention of Belém do Pará in 28 countries of Latin America and the Caribbean. The countries covered by the Institute were Brazil, Chile, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay and Peru. The survey was completed in November 2000; another survey assessing the human rights of women in Latin America and the Caribbean was undertaken. The survey covered 28 countries and contributed to the analysis on the human rights of women in the region and allowed for the development of guidelines for the women's movement in Latin America working in world conferences on human rights, population, social development and women. The guidelines had great influence on the working groups for the Optional Protocol to the Convention against all Forms of Discrimination against Women (General Assembly resolution 54/4, annex) and the incorporation of a gender perspective in the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court;

(b) Training and technical assistance. The Latin American Institute conducted or participated in more than 70 courses, seminars, conferences and workshops in Argentina, Austria, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Italy, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Sri Lanka, the United States of America, Uruguay and Venezuela. Those activities have been directed towards target groups, including legislators, government officials, judges, prosecutors, defenders, attorneys and academics. An outstanding activity was the first Latin American meeting of female justices of supreme courts held in Costa Rica in 2000.

7. Domestic violence

32. The Latin American Institute continued the implementation of its regional training programme against domestic violence to assist the Governments of the region through the sensitization and training of personnel with regard to issues such as justice, health and education. The following highlights activities of particular note:

(a) Research. The Concealed Side of Masculinity: A Treatment for Offenders (Costa Rica, 1999), targeted at penitentiary systems and therapists and Evaluation of the Results of the Police Training Programme Implemented in Guatemala (Guatemala, 2000);

(b) Training. Three courses on the theme of “Violence within the family” for 40 trainers of the Police Academy held in Guatemala in 1999. In addition, there was a regional forum on the theme of “Domestic violence, human rights and police practice” for high echelons of the police of Central America held in Guatemala in 1999, and of a training programme on the theme of “Education and training of therapists: treatment for victims and survivors of sexual abuse and incest, held in Costa Rica in 2000.

8. International criminal law

33. Through its programme on women, gender and justice, the Latin American Institute contributed to the debate on the structure and mandate of the International Criminal Court, participating in all six preparatory committees and the 1998 Rome Diplomatic Conference. It coordinated the women’s caucus for gender justice in the International Criminal Court fostering the inclusion of a gender perspective in issues such as crimes against women and the Statute of the International Criminal Court. Furthermore, the programme coordinated the incorporation of rights for the victims with disabilities in the Rules of Evidence and Procedures.

34. Training and technical assistance activities included seminars and workshops on the ratification and implementation of the International Criminal Court Statute in Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, El Salvador and Guatemala. It is anticipated that in 2001, further training and technical assistance activities in the Caribbean and Latin American countries will be undertaken jointly by the International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy and the Latin American Institute. For that purpose, the Latin American Institute has translated into Spanish the International Criminal Court: Manual for the Ratification and Implementation of the Rome Statute developed by the International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy and the International Centre for Human Rights and Democracy Development.

C. European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations

35. During the reporting period, the European Institute for Crime Prevention and Control, affiliated with the United Nations, undertook several activities, summaries of which follow. As during the previous reporting period, 1999-2000, the European Institute has built on its cooperative partnerships with Member States, national academic and research institutes, major inter-governmental and non-governmental organizations, and individual experts. The particular focus of the activities of the European Institute at the turn of the millennium has been on three themes: organized crime, violence against women and the preparations for the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, although other areas have also been touched upon.

36. The European Institute is financed by the Government of Finland. The Government of Sweden provides a significant contribution to support the activities of the Institute each fiscal year and funds for certain projects are received occasionally from other Governments.

37. The most significant activities of the European Institute during the reporting period have included the following:

(a) The European Institute was actively involved in the negotiation of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the protocols thereto. A staff member of the European Institute was a member of the delegation of Finland throughout the negotiations. The negotiation process was reported to a wider audience through the Newsletter of the European Institute, and a regularly updated electronic version of the text of the draft convention appeared after each session of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime on the web site of the European Institute;

(b) The European Institute, together with the Ministry of Justice of Finland, organized an expert seminar jointly between Finland and China on the theme of “Prevention of organized crime” in Helsinki in October 2000;

(c) An article on the potential for minimizing the risk of organized crime within the framework of profit-making activities through the utilization of anticipative methods was published by the European Institute in 1999;

(d) The European Institute published an article on the regulation of firearms in 1999. The article was later translated into French and published by the Groupe de recherche et d'information sur la paix et la sécurité (GRIP) in 2000;

(e) An article on drug offences in the global criminal justice system was also published by the European Institute in 2000;

(f) The European Institute, together with UNICRI and Statistics Canada, have launched the idea of an international survey on violence against women. The plan was introduced at the Tenth Congress and a pilot survey was conducted in early 2000 in Estonia. Funds for the planning stage of the project have been provided by the Ministry of Justice of Canada and further funding is being sought to carry out the survey;

(g) The Institute has previously organized two training courses on the theme of "Law enforcement officers on the prevention and control of violence against women", both of which were preceded by a seminar for decision makers. Negotiations with law enforcement authorities in Estonia have been carried out and a similar course will be held in early 2001 in Tallinn. The course is supported financially by the State Department of the United States;

(h) An article on compensation practices of member States of the European Union connected to crimes against women was published by the European Institute in 1999;

(i) The European Institute had the main organizational and substantive responsibility for one of the four workshops at the Tenth Congress concerning the role of women in the criminal justice system. The work was carried out in close cooperation with other institutes in the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network. The materials and proceedings of the workshop were due to be published by the European Institute in early 2001;

(j) The proceedings of the Sixth European Colloquium organized by the European Institute in 1998 on the themes of the workshops of the Tenth Congress were published in 1999;

(k) Following needs assessments in the field of the computerization of criminal justice systems in Bulgaria and the Russian Federation, pilot projects comprising advisory services, training and provision of expertise and the development of computer-based case-tracking and management systems were launched in those countries in 1999. The project in the Russian Federation focused on the region of Tver and was successfully finalized at the end of 2000. The project in Bulgaria was prematurely terminated because of organizational problems;

(l) An updated version of the Directory: Computerized Criminal Justice Information Systems appeared in early 2001;

(m) The European Institute has again taken on responsibility for analysing responses from Europe and North America to the Sixth United Nations Survey of Crime Trends and Operations of Criminal Justice Systems. A group of international experts met in 2000 and the work is scheduled to be completed in 2001;

(n) A staff member of the European Institute was seconded for six weeks to the Centre for International Crime Prevention to continue work on the global analysis of the Sixth United Nations Survey;

(o) Two external experts have undertaken research to assess the effectiveness of international technical assistance programmes in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. The study looks at assistance provided to law enforcement in Estonia from three donor countries and the report will appear in early 2001. The project was financed by the United States State Department;

(p) In accordance with Economic and Social Council resolution 1995/12 of 24 July 1995, the European Institute has established a database on international technical cooperation projects in the field of crime prevention and criminal justice. The database has been made available with certain restrictions and through free access to the Internet. In addition, in its resolution 1999/24 of 25 July 1994, the Council recommend that possibilities be explored of expanding that pilot project as a standing activity, with global applicability. A report on the use of the database is before the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice (E/CN.15/2001/7). The project was funded by the United States State Department;

(q) In 2000, the European Institute initiated a project on the prison situation in countries of central and eastern Europe. The project is a follow-up activity to a study undertaken by the European Institute in 1995 that looked at possible changes in legislation, the state of progress with regard to quality in adherence to the Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners² and the European Prison Rules, the most pressing current concerns and the extent, nature of and need for foreign technical assistance. The project received financial support from the Home Office of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland;

(r) Complementing the study on prisons, a pilot study was initiated in 2000 to examine health care in prisons in central and eastern Europe;

(s) In 1999, the European Institute, together with the Finnish Police College, organized the fifth biennial meeting of the World Criminal Justice Library Network in Finland on the theme of "Organized crime in the information age";

(t) Profiles of the criminal justice systems of Greece, Italy and Lithuania appeared in a publication series of the European Institute;

(u) The European Institute granted four short-term scholarships in 1999 and five in 2000. Six scholarships have been granted for 2001.

D. African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders

38. During the reporting period, the activities of the African Institute for the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders included the following:

(a) The African Institute undertook a survey on extradition and mutual legal assistance in Africa, a project funded by the United States State Department. The survey was conducted with a view to collecting information on existing extradition and mutual assistance arrangements of the States of Africa. Two draft conventions were discussed and approved in Cairo in November 1999 and drafts were presented to the Organization of African Unity (OAU) in Lomé in July 2000. It is hoped that the draft conventions will be approved by Heads of State in July 2001;

(b) The African Institute has also undertaken a project that deals with trafficking in firearms. A meeting was organized for representatives of Africa in Kampala on illegal trafficking in firearms and its effects on crime rates in Africa. The African Institute continued working on the project by designing a questionnaire dealing with all firearms issues that was sent to all countries in Africa. A database will be created based on the survey results, which were presented and discussed at a meeting held in November 2000. An agreement has been reached with the Governments of African States to establish a centre at the African Institute to continue monitoring and collecting data.

IV. Activities of the associated institutes

A. Australian Institute of Criminology

39. The Australian Institute of Criminology has four research programmes, each programme made up of teams assigned to areas of research. During the reporting period, the Australian Institute produced numerous books and articles. Since January 1999, it has published 100 reports in the Trends and Issues series and 20 monographs in the Research and Public Policy series on topics related to each programme. A full list can be obtained from the Australian Institute's web site and the Trends and Issues papers are on the web site in full. The web site will soon be launching, on behalf of the Campbell Collaboration, an evidence-based compilation of crime prevention programmes. Details of the programmes are as follows:

(a) The sophisticated crime programme focuses on electronic theft, fraud studies, customs fraud, environmental crime and trafficking in people;

(b) The violence and property crime programme is concerned with homicide monitoring, firearms and dangerous weapons monitoring, crimes against business, gangs and crime prevention;

(c) The crime analysis and modelling programme is devoted to data analysis, hot-spot monitoring, drug-market modelling, justice system modelling, modelling survey data and evaluation studies;

(d) The public policy programme is subdivided into several subprogrammes: the drugs monitoring team, which focuses on drug-use monitoring in Australia, drugs and property crime, and compiles a national-offender database; the drugs evaluation team, which is responsible for an illicit drugs reporting system, a national diversionary schemes database and Operation Mantle; subprogrammes in corrections and deaths in custody; and the crime and vulnerable populations subprogramme, which concentrates primarily on women, children and the elderly, as well as victims studies.

40. Within the framework of the global programme against trafficking in persons, the Australian Institute cooperated with the Centre for International Crime Prevention and UNICRI in carrying out a project entitled "Coalitions against trafficking in human beings in the Philippines", by making available the services of a staff member to participate in the assessment component in 1999-2000.

41. In 2001, the Australian Institute will be strengthening its activities in criminological and criminal justice system training and looking to collaborate with other institutes. In addition, new emphasis is being placed on programme evaluation and again cooperation with other institutes will be sought.

B. International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy

42. During the reporting period, the International Centre for Criminal Law Reform and Criminal Justice Policy conducted many projects and other activities in cooperation with other institutes of the Programme network and actively sought to expand such partnerships. Its activities included the following during that period:

(a) 2000 was a year of review and evaluation for the International Centre. A programme of work for the next five years was approved. With respect to United Nations-related work, the International Centre intends to support, to the extent possible, the specific aspects of the common priorities, in particular trafficking in human beings and the implementation of the protocol through research and technical assistance. The scope and shape of the project will depend on support provided by the Government of Canada;

(b) Within the broader context of the United Nations global programme on money-laundering and the agenda of the Asia Pacific Group on Money Laundering, the International Centre is conducting a project entitled "Money-laundering in Asia and the Pacific". The first phase has been completed and five research papers have been prepared as a part of the report of the Legal Working Group of the Asia Pacific Group on Money Laundering. A regional workshop on mutual legal assistance for legal officers and prosecutors is planned for the Asia and Pacific region in early summer 2001. The International Centre is working in cooperation with the Asia Pacific Group on Money Laundering and with the International Association of Prosecutors on the planning of that event. The project is supported by both the United States Secretary of State and the Government of Canada;

(c) A project entitled "Protection of children—model guidelines for prosecution of crime against children" was developed by the International Centre in cooperation with the International Association of Prosecutors and with the financial assistance of the International Society for the Reform of Criminal Law. The project involved preparing a revised draft of model guidelines for the effective prosecution of crimes against children, which was presented at the International Association of Prosecutors in Beijing in September 1999. The International Centre also assisted the International Association of Prosecutors in the development of a plan focusing on the distribution of the guidelines and the provision of training sessions. The International Centre would consider extending its partnership to include other member institutes of the Programme network in research and analysis, before drafting the guidelines. It is seeking cooperation from other member institutes of the Programme network, for which there may be limited financial assistance to assist in a part of the project. Funding for the project has come from various sources;

(d) The project entitled "Thailand child abuse investigation and care" is an ongoing multidisciplinary project, to be completed during 2001. It deals with the treatment and protection of children as victims and witnesses within the judicial system of Thailand. Successful completion of the project is expected to produce an effective model that is intended for replication throughout Thailand and possibly other countries in Asia;

(e) In partnership with the Latin American Institute and the Inter-American Commission of Women and the Organization of American States (OAS), the International Centre conducted a review of the progress made in the implementation of the Convention of Belém do Pará in selected countries during the five years following its adoption by the General Assembly of OAS. The review assessed the continued efforts to affirm and protect women's human rights and denounce violence against women as a human rights violation. The review refers to both specific provisions of the Convention of Belém do Pará as well as the model crime prevention and criminal justice strategies adopted by the United Nations General Assembly to eliminate violence against women. The survey, which covered 28 countries, was completed in the summer of 2000 and the results were presented to the Inter-American Commission of Women in November 2000;

(f) The International Centre assisted the Canadian Institute for the Administration of Justice in the planning of the annual conference of the Canadian Institute on the theme of "Science, truth and justice", held in Victoria, Canada, in October 2000. A full session was dedicated to criminal law involving the Internet. A research proposal is being drafted for a programme of work to examine the impact of international criminal activity, through the use of the Internet and computers, on local and national systems;

(g) The International Centre, through its China/Canada cooperation project, provides technical assistance to China in the reform of criminal law procedure, implementation of United Nations standards related to criminal law and justice, and implementation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (General Assembly resolution 2200 A (XXI), annex). It is also maintaining an ongoing project with China in the area of corrections. Financial support is provided by the Canadian International Development Agency and the Ford Foundation;

(h) In the area of international criminal law, the International Centre continues to sustain efforts to support the creation of a permanent International Criminal Court. In 2000 and 2001, the International Centre produced International Criminal Court: Manual for the Ratification and Implementation of the Rome

Statute, which is now available in English, French and Spanish. In 2001, with the assistance of the Canadian International Development Agency and the Department of Justice and the Department of Foreign Affairs for Canada, the International Centre is organizing a series of five regional training sessions to assist countries in developing legislation and administrative procedures to assist the International Criminal Court when it comes into existence. Regional training sessions have already taken place in the Cook Islands and Cameroon;

(i) Finally, the International Centre, through its ongoing work in the area of corrections, has promoted the implementation of human rights standards and principles, as well as other United Nations standards and norms in crime prevention and criminal justice, as they relate to corrections and the treatment of offenders. Projects remain ongoing or are currently under development in China and in parts of Africa and Latin America.

C. International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences

43. During the reporting period, activities of the International Institute of Higher Studies in Criminal Sciences included:

(a) The International Conference on Lay Participation in the Criminal Trial in the Twenty-first Century, held in Siracusa, Italy, in May 1999 and attended by 52 participants and 18 speakers from 22 countries;

(b) A study seminar on strengthening investigation techniques against organized crime, attended by 25 public prosecutors and law enforcement officials from Albania, Poland, the Russian Federation and The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. The seminar, organized in cooperation with the Council of Europe, the European Commission and the Ministry of Justice of Italy, was held in Siracusa, Italy, in June 1999;

(c) The third training seminar for 30 prosecutors from Egypt, on international cooperation in criminal matters, held in Siracusa, Italy, in June 1999. The seminar was organized with the support of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Italy and in collaboration with the Ministry of Justice of Egypt;

(d) An informal meeting of the Preparatory Commission for the Establishment of an International Criminal Court on Rules of Procedure and Evidence, held in Siracusa, Italy, in June 1999. The meeting was attended by 95 experts from 51 countries;

(e) Within the framework of the session of the Preparatory Commission for the Establishment of an International Criminal Court, held in July and August 1999, the International Institute organized two briefing sessions for official delegations on ratification and national implementation of the Statute of the International Criminal Court. The briefing sessions were each attended by 60 participants and 22 speakers from 40 countries and held in New York on 31 July and 7 August 1999;

(f) The third International Colloquium for Young Penalists on International Criminal Law in the Twenty-first Century, held in Siracusa, Italy, in September 1999 and attended by 96 participants and 19 panellists from 47 universities;

(g) The first training course for justice officials from Albania, held in Siracusa, Italy, in November and December 1999. The International Institute was requested by the Presidency of the Council of Ministers of Italy to organize, in collaboration with the Council of Europe and the European Police Office (Europol), a major technical assistance programme in support of the criminal justice system of Albania. The first training course was attended by 34 participants and 13 panellists;

(h) An informal meeting of the Preparatory Commission for the Establishment of an International Criminal Court on Elements of Crime, held in Siracusa, Italy, in January and February 2000. The meeting was attended by 114 experts from 60 countries and was organized in collaboration with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Italy;

(i) The second and third training courses for Justice Officials from Albania, held in Siracusa, Italy, in January to February and in March 2000. The second course was attended by 29 participants and 15 panellists, while the third was attended by 37 participants and 14 panellists;

(j) A seminar on the problem of terrorism and the application of the Arab Convention against Terrorism, held in Siracusa, Italy, in June 2000 and attended by 35 participants and 8 speakers from 15 countries;

(k) The fourth training seminar for 31 prosecutors from Egypt on international cooperation in criminal matters, held in Siracusa, Italy, in June 2000. The seminar was organized with the support of the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Italy and in collaboration with the Office of the General Prosecutor of Egypt;

(l) The International Institute participated in the third workshop of the “Joint European Project against Organized Crime—Falcone Programme”, held in Madrid from 15 to 18 June 2000;

(m) The preparatory meeting of the Presidents and Rapporteurs Généraux of the XVII International Congress of Penal Law (Beijing, 2004), organized in Siracusa, Italy, on 8 December 2000 in collaboration with the International Association of Penal Law;

(n) In collaboration with the Commissioner for Human Rights of the Council of Europe, the International Institute organized an international seminar on the role of monotheist religions in the prevention of armed conflicts, held in Siracusa, Italy, in December 2000 and attended by 22 experts from 12 countries;

(o) In addition to the above programmes, in 1999 and 2000, the International Institute was involved in the work of the Ad Hoc Committee for the Elaboration of a Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and attended all the sessions of the Ad Hoc Committee and the High-level Political Signing Conference, held in Palermo, Italy, from 12 to 15 December 2000. The International Institute is expected to participate in the follow-up envisaged to ensure implementation of the Convention;

(p) Publications issued by the International Institute during the reporting period included volume 71, nos. 1/2 (2000), of the International Review of Penal Law on “International Criminal Court: ratification and national implementing legislation” (in English, French and Spanish) and the proceedings of the International Conference on Lay Participation in the Criminal Trial in the Twenty-first Century (Nouvelles études pénales, n. 19).

D. Naif Arab Academy for Security Sciences

44. The annual work programme of the Naif Arab Academy for Security Sciences for the year 2001 is designed to reflect the objectives set by the Arab Academy, which are geared to meet the requirements of the Arab Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programmes, Plans and Strategies. The time schedule of the work programme aims at carrying out the planned activities accurately and promptly in order to secure the participation of all Arab countries. The following is an outline of the work programme for the year 2001. It will be carried out by the specialized institutes of the Arab Academy, as follows:

(a) The Institute of Graduate Studies grants the following degrees: Diploma, Master and Ph.D. in courses such as police sciences, criminal justice and social sciences;

(b) The Training Institute offers training courses and seminars in the field of juvenile justice, organized crime, money-laundering, drug-related crimes, environmental crimes and other forensic courses such as gunshot residue analysis;

(c) The Studies and Research Centre conducts activities such as the following studies and research: security of documents and data; the future of terrorism in the twenty-first century; awareness programmes aimed at forming a public opinion against crime; the factors leading to drug addiction in Arab countries, measures to evaluate training and educational procedures, child labour and how it is related to deviance. The Studies and Research Centre also publishes a number of selected titles, two issues of the Arab Journal for Security Sciences and Training and 12 issues of Al-Amn wa Al-Hayat (Security and life magazine).

E. National Institute of Justice of the United States Department of Justice

45. The National Institute of Justice is currently carrying out research for which approximately $150 million are available. Many of its projects do not as yet have a coordinated international approach, for example, the project on crime and justice 2000, which includes four volumes of papers written by experts in their field of knowledge from various countries (four of its chapters deal with global issues). Copies of the publication are available or will be made available electronically.

46. Over a six-year period, the United States has invested approximately $9 billion for community policing. As a result, the Institute was asked to administer an independent evaluation of the community-oriented policing services programme and has recently submitted an evaluation report on community policing and on the different responses of the community. The Institute has also worked in cooperation with the Office of National Drug Control Policy on a demonstration project in cities on how to deal with the drug problem. The research includes an evaluation component and a report is available on how the strategy works.

47. The Institute has undertaken an arrestee drug monitoring programme that has transformed and expanded the former drug use forecasting programme, during which booked arrestees were interviewed and drug-tested at various sites nationwide. The arrestee drug monitoring programme provides programme planning that can be used to conduct local research and evaluation projects and to inform local policy decisions about drug abuse. It is now in place in 35 sites and, pending increased funding, will expand to encompass 75 cities.

48. During the reporting period, the Institute carried out the following international projects and programmes:

(a) The international arrestee drug abuse monitoring programme is an outgrowth of the domestic research programme and has developed into a research partnership among criminal justice organizations around the world. Using standardized drug-testing methodologies and predictive models that have been perfected in the United States by the arrestee drug abuse monitoring programme, the international arrestee drug abuse monitoring programme is one of the only international drug prevalence measures that articulates the consequences of drug abuse within and across national boundaries. The international arrestee drug abuse monitoring programme currently has testing sites in Australia, Chile, Malaysia, the Netherlands, South Africa and the United Kingdom. Testing sites in Taiwan Province of China are scheduled to begin operation in the near future;

(b) The United States/Ukraine partnership is a project that supports researchers from Ukraine and the United States who are collaborating on joint studies of organized crime, drug trafficking and human trafficking in Ukraine. The project also assesses law enforcement training of Ukrainians by Americans and is building Internet connectivity among researchers and practitioners from both countries. The results of the research partnership are expected by the end of next year;

(c) A project entitled "International challenge grants" whose goals are to support and encourage cross-national and inter-agency partnerships devoted to producing and utilizing comparative research on crime and to answer key research questions on crime and the administration of justice that are important to both American and other researchers, practitioners and policy makers. The programme challenges researchers from the United States to seek counterparts in other countries to conduct joint comparative studies. Current international challenge grant projects include: research into the structure and operations of China-based smuggling of migrants, through interviews with New York City law enforcement groups and smugglers in Fuzhou, China; a comparative study of juvenile justice processing in Bremen, Germany and Denver, United States and its impact on criminal career trajectories; and research into the extent, nature and causes of sexual exploitation of and trafficking in children to Canada, Mexico and the United States;

(d) The Moldova Project. The Institute will provide technical support for a project in the Republic of Moldova administered by the International Criminal Investigative Technical Assistance Program of the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice. High-technology platforms using the Internet will be set up at the Moldovan National Police Academy and National Police College in Chisinau. The Institute will also evaluate the training programmes using the new facilities at those sites;

(e) The Institute will soon introduce its new international criminal justice monograph series dealing with international criminal justice topics, Issues in International Crime. The first issue discusses crime, criminal justice and criminology in post-Soviet Ukraine. Forthcoming issues will examine Russian organized crime; organized crime and the shadow economy in the Russian Federation; and the democratization of police forces in emerging democracies.

F. Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law

49. The Raoul Wallenberg Institute of Human Rights and Humanitarian Law is an academic institution based at the University of Lund, Sweden. The purpose of the Institute is to promote research, training and academic education in the field of human rights law, refugee law, humanitarian law, intellectual property rights, international labour standards and international criminal law as set forth in instruments adopted under the auspices of international and regional inter-governmental organizations. The objective is realized by initiating, developing and supporting activities in those fields.

50. The list of activities organized by the Institute in 1999 and 2000 is extensive, therefore only some activities within the mandate of the Centre for International Crime Prevention are highlighted here. A detailed description of the activities of the Institute, and dates and venues of different activities such as training programmes may be found on the web site of the Institute (<http://www.rwi.lu.se>).

(a) Research. During the reporting period, the Raoul Wallenberg Institute and the Danish Centre for Human Rights organized a series of meetings with researchers examining the links between good governance and human rights, between transparency and freedom of information and between anti-corruption efforts and equal rights. The results of those deliberations will be presented in a book edited by Hans-Otto Sano and Gudmunder Alfredsson, to be published by Kluwer Law International in 2001;

(b) Technical cooperation. With funding from the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency, the European Union and other sources, the Institute continued to organize academic programmes and institutional capacity-building for the dissemination of human rights standards and democratic values in developing countries and countries with economies in transition. A summary of such activities follows:

(i) Training programmes. The Institute continued its in-country training programmes on human rights standards and democratic values for developing countries and countries with economies in transition. Those programmes, which concentrate on long-term commitments, both in terms of financial implications and programme development, have to a large extent focused on human rights in the administration of justice. Training in human rights for police and prison officers, prosecutors, magistrates and judges and other officials involved in the administration of justice forms an important part of the programme. The programmes for institutions in the field of administration of justice are normally carried out in direct cooperation with the respective ministries of justice or the interior. The focus is on the dissemination of United Nations standards and norms, leaving to local and regional partners the development of such standards and norms in the specific context of the particular national system. The countries and territories covered in 1999 and 2000 were China, Ethiopia, Georgia, Indonesia, Kenya, Palestine, South Africa, Uganda, Viet Nam, Zambia and Zimbabwe;

(ii) Academic programmes. In addition, the Institute has been organizing advanced academic programmes in human rights for senior government officials, academics and representatives from non-governmental organizations at its premises in Lund, Sweden. Such courses last five weeks, with participants from countries and territories all over the world. Similar courses have, during the time period covered by the present report, also been organized on a bilateral basis for representatives of the criminal justice systems in China, Ethiopia, Kenya and Palestine. Those courses focused mainly on human rights in the administration of justice and included theoretical training as well as practical elements, such as study visits to Swedish criminal justice institutions;

(iii) Support to documentation centres. Since 1991, the Institute has contributed to the establishment of human rights documentation centres at academic institutions and governmental and non-governmental organizations. In 1999 and 2000, agreements for the supply of human rights literature to documentation centres were signed with the following criminal justice institutions: the Regional Justice Bureau of the Regional

Supreme Court in Bahir Dar, Ethiopia; the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda in Arusha; and the National Prosecuting Authority at the Justice College of South Africa;

(iv) Institutional support. From 1993 to 1999, the Raoul Wallenberg Institute supported activities carried out by the Community Peace Programme at the University of the Western Cape in South Africa. The Community Peace Programme works in close cooperation with the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Safety and Security in training and research projects aimed at establishing a dialogue between the criminal justice system and the community. Training in community policing, the production of manuals for lay assessors and the development of crime prevention strategies and alternative models for conflict resolutions are examples of activities carried out by the Community Peace Programme;

(v) Since 1999, the Raoul Wallenberg Institute has been a partner to the United Nations Development Programme project aimed at strengthening the capacity of the Public Defender's Office in Georgia. Within the framework of the project, the Institute has contributed substantial support in the form of literature and computers to the Public Defender's Office. The Institute has also organized training courses in human rights and contributed to the translation into Georgian of a compilation of human rights standards;

(vi) In 2000, the Institute signed an agreement on institutional support with the Southern African Human Rights Trust, a regional non-governmental organization based in Harare. The objective of the Trust is to promote human rights and good governance in southern Africa, through training and research on issues such as human rights in the administration of justice;

(c) Conferences and meetings. During 1999 and 2000 the Institute participated in and organized the following expert meetings and seminars:

(i) On 8 May 1999, an expert meeting convened in Lund, Sweden, under the auspices of the Foundation on Inter-Ethnic Relations in The Hague and the Institute, adopted the Lund Recommendations dealing with the political rights of minorities;

(ii) On 27 and 28 May 1999, the United Nations Secretary-General visited Lund, Sweden, in order to receive an honorary doctorate from the Faculty of Law at Lund University. He also visited the Raoul Wallenberg Institute and met with students of the Law Faculty and the Institute;

(iii) In June 1999, the Institute, in cooperation with the Asia-Europe Foundation and the Ministry for Foreign Affairs of France, organized the second informal Asia-Europe Meeting (ASEM) seminar on human rights, which took place in Beijing. The purpose of the seminar was to improve the dialogue between Asia and Europe in the field of human rights and the rule of law in an informal and non-confrontational manner;

(iv) In December 1999, the Ministry for Foreign Affairs of Sweden and the Institute organized a symposium in Lund, Sweden, on conflict prevention in order to honour the work of Max van der Stoep, the High Commissioner on National Minorities of the Organization of Security and Cooperation in Europe;

(v) From 19 to 21 June 2000, the Institute helped organize the third informal ASEM seminar, which took place in Paris;

(d) Publications. A large number of publications were produced during 1999 and 2000, a selection of which follows. Further information is available at (<http://www.rwi.lu.se>):

(i) Raoul Wallenberg Report Series, ISSN 0283-085X. Report No. 28: Human Rights Policing for Station Commissioners, A Review of Training for the South African Police Service—Northern Province, 1996-1997 (1999); Report No. 29: Human Rights Training for the South African Provincial Administration: An Evaluation of Training for Administration of Justice Officials, Thaba Nchu, the Free State, 10-14 March 1997 (1999); Report No. 30: Second Informal ASEM Seminar on Human Rights, Beijing, 27-29 June 1999 (1999); Report No. 31: Health Gaps and Migratory Movements (2000); and Report No. 32: Human Rights Training Materials, a Bibliographical Overview of Existing Human Rights Teaching and Training Materials (2000);

(ii) The Raoul Wallenberg Institute Series of Intergovernmental Human Rights Documentation. Volume I: Concluding Observations of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child: Third to Seventeenth Sessions (1993-1998), Martinus Nijhoff, 2000, ISBN 90-411-1307-X; volume II: Conclusions and Recommendations of the UN Committee against Torture: Eleventh to Twenty-second Sessions (1993-1999), Martinus Nijhoff, 2000, ISBN 90-411-1379-7.

G. International Centre for the Prevention of Crime

51. The reporting period has been a productive one for the International Centre for the Prevention of Crime, as well as one of change, renewal and reorganization. The overall vision and mission of the International Centre for the Prevention of Crime has been renewed, with emphasis on facilitating international dialogue and analysis and promoting strategic and technical assistance, and the web site of the International Centre has been expanded. Plans for a three-year programme of work are currently being completed, work is continuing on strengthening collaborative links and working methods and further development of the web site is being undertaken. An outline of the various activities follows:

(a) Exchange of expertise. There were several opportunities for the exchange of expertise between subject specialists representing a variety of organizations:

(i) The anniversary conference on the theme of "Harnessing what works" in October 1999 brought together representatives of 160 Governments, police and local government leaders, researchers and crime prevention specialists to discuss how to capitalize on the accumulating knowledge about crime prevention;

(ii) In December 1999, the second seminar on the role of the police in crime prevention, which forms part of the programme on skill and expertise sharing, took place in Coventry, United Kingdom, and was attended by 90 participants. The third seminar in the series is scheduled to take place in September 2001 in Washington, D.C.;

(iii) The International Centre wrote the background paper and organized the workshop on community involvement in crime prevention for the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders, held in Vienna in April 2000;

(iv) A seminar attended by 60 city and police leaders from countries in western Africa was organized in Barmako in June 2000. It focused on developing urban safety and crime prevention through partnerships between the police and local authorities;

(v) In August 2000, the International Centre was actively involved in the organization of the Tenth International Victimology Symposium, in Montreal, Canada, and presented a workshop on making the case for the prevention of victimization and crime;

(b) Publications. Several reports and monographs were completed, as follows:

(i) Crime Prevention Digest II: Comparative Analysis of Successful Community Safety and 100 Crime Prevention Programs to Inspire Action Across the World (1999) are both available in English and French, and Spanish versions will be completed shortly. Other reports include Six Safer Cities on the Crest of the Wave of Crime Prevention, produced for the National Crime Prevention Council of the United States. Making the Case for Crime Prevention was published by the Bureau of Justice Assistance of the United States Department of Justice in 2000, in its International Crime Prevention Series;

(ii) In 2000, a series of monographs was completed that focused on a closer international look at specific issues or techniques for effective intervention. The first four in the series will be published in 2001 by the Department of Justice of Canada and the final two will be published by the United States Bureau of Justice Assistance, also in 2001. The monographs include: Community Safety Diagnosis: Mobilizing Knowledge and Action; The Benefits of Crime Prevention for Victims: Effective Action to Tackle Repeat Victimization; Reducing and Preventing Residential Burglary and Home Invasions; Investing in Youth 12-18: International

Approaches to Preventing Crime and Victimization; The Role of Local Government in Community Safety; Promoting Safety in Schools: International Experience and Action;

(iii) The reports mentioned will be available in English from the United States Bureau of Justice Assistance, and in English and French from the National Crime Prevention Centre, Canada (www.crime-prevention.org). Summary versions will also be available. Copies will be available in both languages on the International Centre for the Prevention of Crime web site in 2001 (www.crime-prevention-intl.org). Other recent publications in English and French include the Compendium of Best Police Practice in Crime Prevention and the Report on the Second Police Seminar;

(c) Strategic assistance. In the reporting period, strategic assistance included a one-year pilot project on the theme of an "Observatory on urban safety and social problems" in Montreal, Canada, which is intended to provide a model for transfer to other cities and municipalities; the start of a three-year project, involving member countries on the Advisory and Policy Board of the International Centre, examining international approaches to the evaluation of crime prevention practice; the development of a tool-kit for municipalities in Canada, in collaboration with the Foundation Dr. Philippe Pinel; and support to the Province of Quebec on the development of its policies on community policing and crime prevention;

(d) Technical assistance. Work included, in partnership with the United Nations Centre for Human Settlements (Habitat), continuation of support to Safer Cities Programmes in Abidjan, Dar es Salaam and in Durban and Johannesburg, South Africa. Other work has included invited missions to Chile, Colombia, Hungary and Mexico to discuss the development of crime prevention strategies and future cooperation.

52. Further information on all activities of the International Centre can be found on the web site (www.crime-prevention-intl.org).

V. Activities of the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council

53. In 1999 and 2000, the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council continued the implementation of its mandates in line with the overall programme directives and priorities. To date, the Advisory Council has decided to concentrate on the topics of organized crime, corruption, trafficking in persons and terrorism. In that framework, a symposium on the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime was held in Rome in February 1999 at the Senate of Italy, in cooperation with the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention. The symposium aimed at promoting more effective national legislation and improved international cooperation in order to cope with organized crime and to harmonize the regulations of States. The symposium brought together policy makers from all over the world, thus fostering the exchange of knowledge and experiences in view of the adoption of the advocated United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime. The symposium also concentrated on the three protocols to the Convention, which will introduce modern and effective regulations for illegal migrations, illegal trafficking in firearms and trafficking in women and children.

54. Continuing to focus on major issues facing the world community, the Advisory Council chose as the topic of its 1999 International Conference, held from 19 to 20 November 1999, "Responding to the challenges of corruption". The Conference was held in Milan, Italy, and was jointly organized with the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and UNICRI, under the auspices of the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of the Interior of Italy. The goals of the Conference were both to enhance coordination and international cooperation in the various anti-corruption activities, including assistance to parliaments, for the drafting of legislation and technical cooperation projects, and to identify problems related to corruption and their effects on good governance, with particular attention to the impact on economic and institutional stability in developing countries and countries in transition. The Conference thus provided an opportunity to exchange information and up-to-date knowledge among experts from all over the world working on a specific field of research, as well as representatives of bodies of the United Nations system, non-governmental organizations, the judiciary and policy makers.

55. Because of the complexity of the phenomenon, the approach adopted took into due consideration the political, judicial and economic aspects through an in-depth examination of the initiatives taken at the international level in the fight against corruption. The International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council, jointly with UNICRI, has published the Conference proceedings (UNICRI publication No. 63, 2000).

56. The outcome of the Conference was essential for preparing the background paper of the workshop on corruption organized by the Advisory Council in cooperation with UNICRI in Vienna on 10 and 11 April 2000 during the Tenth United Nations Congress on the Prevention of Crime and the Treatment of Offenders. The report of the workshop was included in the report of the Tenth Congress.¹

57. In September 2000, the Advisory Council organized the International Conference on Countering Terrorism Through Enhanced International Cooperation, held in Courmayeur, Italy. The Conference, organized in collaboration with the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and under the auspices of the Ministry of Justice of Italy, was attended by more than 190 experts from all over the world belonging to different disciplines (including economic, juridical, social and statistical subjects), as well as by representatives of entities of the United Nations system and non-governmental organizations. The goal of the Conference was to enlarge the repertoire of responses to terrorism and to create new strategies to prevent and control terrorism as a form of conflict-waging. The proceedings focused on old and new manifestations of terrorism by looking at current developments and emerging trends. It analysed social-revolutionary terrorism and state-sponsored terrorism, which seems to be declining, as well as religious-fundamentalist, right-wing, racist, single-issue and separatist terrorism, which appear to be on the increase in some countries. At the same time, particular attention was devoted to the new forms and tools of terrorism related to computer networks and to new technologies that serve both terrorists and those combating them.

58. The International Conference was preceded by a coordination meeting of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Programme network and a plenary session of the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council. A new Executive Board of the Advisory Council was elected from the nominations submitted, with due regard to geographical distribution and non-governmental organizations and professional representation. The new Board devoted its first session to planning forthcoming activities.

59. The Advisory Council cooperated with the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and the Italian Organizing Committee in the organization of the High-level Political Signing Conference for the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime and the Protocols Thereto, held in Palermo, Italy, from 12 to 15 December 2000.

60. The Advisory Council, jointly with the United Nations Office for Drug Control and Crime Prevention and UNICRI, organized parallel events during the Conference in Palermo, namely a seminar on the rule of law in the global village: issues of sovereignty and universality, held in Palermo from 12 to 14 December, and the Forum for Global Action against Trafficking held in Catania on 14 December 2000. In cooperation with Liberia, the Advisory Council also organized a meeting on prevention strategies against transnational organized crime: the role of non-governmental organizations.

61. The quarterly Newsletter of the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council was issued with the cooperation of the Naif Arab Academy for Security Sciences.
