Purpose of This Report

This report is intended to serve three purposes. First it is intended to present a summary of the Ancillary Meetings; Second is to serve as a report to the members of the NGO community so they can appreciate the contributions they make to the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Program; Third is to act as a background piece for the planning of future UN Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice. Some of the detail contained in this report is included for that purpose.

Overview

The ancillary meeting activities for the Fourteenth Congress were coordinated with the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) Division of Treaty Affairs. The organization of the ancillary meetings was in cooperation with the United Nations Programme Network Institutes (PNI). Gary Hill, a representative of the The Siracusa International Institute for Criminal Justice and Human Rights organized and coordinated the ancillary meetings.

Activities Prior to the Congress

Visits and Presentations

Presentations about the ancillary meetings were made to the two sessions of the Commission on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice, acting as the preparatory body for the Fourteenth UN Congress. Presentations on the ancillary meetings were made during several Commission side events and meetings of the Alliance of NGOs on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and of the Programme Network Institutes.

Presentations were made at the regional preparatory meetings held in Bangkok/Thailand, Beirut/Lebanon, Addis Ababa/Ethiopia and Vienna/Austria.

Additional pre-congress coordination activities included:

- Two visits was made to Vienna to coordinate with UN staff.
- Four visits were made to Japan to coordinate with UN and Japanese host committee staff. During two of the visits, several government and criminal justice agencies were visited and their staff encouraged to consider hosting ancillary meetings, and arranging tours for Congress delegates of their facilities (prisons, NGO programs, etc.). The universities were also asked to consider providing volunteer interpreters and rapporteurs for the ancillary meetings. During the two years prior to the Congress, communication and coordination activities were held with members of the New York and Vienna Alliance of NGOs on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and with members of the United Nations Programme Network Institutes (PNI).

The existing www.un-congress.org Web site was modified to contain updated information on the Fourteenth United Nations Congress:

- A section on previous Congresses and background information on the Fourteenth UN Congress.
• A section on Kyoto, Japan, including local weather, travel, housing, customs and related information.
• A section on the Congress preparatory meetings and Congress background papers.
• A section on NGO activities and how to register.
• A section for those interested in hosting an ancillary meeting, including appropriate forms to be completed.
• A section for potential volunteers.
• A draft program (updated weekly) on ancillary meetings.

Notification to NGOs
B. Notices were placed in various NGO publications and individual notices were sent to NGOs informing them about the Congress and how to request an invitation.
C. Notices were sent to NGOs inviting them to conduct Ancillary Meetings.
D. All NGOs interested in hosting Ancillary meetings were sent detailed information on how to proceed:
   a. A minimum of five notices telling them what was needed from them in terms of information.
   b. Referrals to the ancillary meeting Web site where they could get information on their Ancillary meeting and an updated copy of the draft Congress program.
   c. Ancillary Meeting Chairs were sent information sheets explaining their duties and letting them know what audio-visual equipment was available and how to request it. Due to the Covid-19 pandemic, this information was modified several times to account for the move to online meetings.
   d. They were asked to edit the abstract of their meetings on the ancillary meeting Web site. Most of those conducting ancillary meetings met their deadlines.
   e. During the three months immediately preceding the Congress, an average of 22 emails a day were received from NGOs or individual experts requesting information.
   f. Consistent communications was maintained between the UN Office in Vienna, the Japanese government representatives and their contract agent in charge of the Congress were sent updates on the proposed ancillary meetings and were requested to encourage Japanese-based agencies and organizations to fill out exhibit and ancillary meeting forms. Coordination and cooperation was effective with the United Nations staff.

Exhibits
Though Congress exhibits have previously been coordinated by our team, for the Fourteenth Congress Japan handled all arrangements. Our team did refer several potential exhibitors to them.

Volunteers
All staff working on the ancillary meetings, including the Director, served as volunteers and no one received compensation for the work.

Interpreters
• Working in cooperation with Eliane Masry, formally a full time UN Interpreter in Vienna and currently a free-lance interpreter, schools with graduate programs in interpretation as well as active interpreters were contacted and offered an opportunity for students to work as interpreters for the UN Congress. They were told that all or part of their transportation expenses would be covered.
• 77 students and interpreters from 16 countries (including many graduated students and five professional interpreters) accepted. The interpretation needed was English, French, Spanish, Chinese, Portuguese, Japanese and Italian.
• They were sent a minimum of five emails (some received more emails than others due to questions they asked) giving them information on the Congress, the draft program (with emphasis on the ancillary meetings they would cover), travel information and housing in Kyoto.
• Unfortunately, due to the pandemic, the United Nations decided that all online meetings would be in English very few people would be able to attend sessions in person. Thus, the number of interpreters recruited were reduced initially to 40, then to 20, then 8 and finally none. It was disappointing to the volunteers and had an impact on the ability of some speakers and participants to fully interact.
74 individuals from 34 nations volunteered to act as session rapporteurs. Their duties originally included:

- Two volunteer rapporteurs attend each ancillary meeting
- Make sure the panel and participants have all they require in terms of equipment and support
- Count the audience and note any issues
- Obtain copies of all papers and visuals (panel members are informed in advance of this)
- Take notes of the session formal presentations
- Take notes of the audience discussion

Due to the pandemic and the change to almost all online meetings and the choice of a single Congress internet platform by the United Nations, the duties of the rapporteurs expanded to include acting as “hosts” for the meetings. The function of the host was to establish the internet connection, open the meeting, provide technical support and download the recordings of the meetings.

Originally 40 were selected, but due to the pandemic and restrictions placed on the number of individuals allowed to enter Japan by the Japan Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the number was reduced to 19. They were:

- Alagesan, Shankar Prakash
- Allred, Katie *
- Bloch, Marine
- Bruggeman, Sydney *
- Chau, Shenyi *
- Dzieniszewska, Marta
- Granados, Melissa Ricon
- Ha Quinh, Nga
- Hassan, Nazirah
- Ingeri, Pamela
- Onambele, Laure Ekani
- Plywaczewski, Katie *
- Ren, Xin
- Reyes, Sarah *
- Sen, Shilpita
- Takeuchi, Yasuaki
- Rose, Talia *
- Williams, Minonna
- Yokota, Anna

* Indicates individuals who are also Contact Center interns and provided pre-Congress support. Shenyi Chau and Talia Rose served as staff coordinators during the Congress.

The rapporteurs were sent a minimum of ten emails with explanations of their duties, sample reports from previous Congresses, copies of the draft program and information on the Congress. In addition, with the implementation of the Congress website platform, they contacted ancillary meeting coordinators in advance of the Congress and held orientation and practice sessions.

The volunteer rapporteurs were registered at the Congress as support staff so they could attend all official Congress functions. Due to the restrictions placed on all United Nations and our staff, because of the pandemic, social functions were generally eliminated though our Japanese hosts did provide some special meals.

Special conditions were placed on all our volunteers traveling into Japan that included:
• Receiving a negative Covid-19 test prior to boarding a plane to Japan
• No stops transit stops in Japan and only using Kansai International Airport
• No use of public transportation or going to any place in Kyoto except the hotel and the Congress venue – all local transportation was furnished by our Japanese hosts. This included no visits to public restaurants – all meals were in the hotel or Congress venue
• Covid-19 negative test upon arriving in Japan and, for some of our staff from nations with increasing infection rates, additional Covid-19 tests during the Congress.
• Negative Covid-19 test prior to departing Japan
• Normal Covid-19 precautions (social distancing, wearing masks, use of hand sanitizers)
• Responding to a daily email survey asking about signs of potential Covid-19. The surveys continued for several days after leaving Japan.

Congress Activities

Ancillary meeting office and facilities
• The Congress NGO office was open 12 hours a day from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day of the Congress.
• Office facilities included desks, computers, 2 printers, a high-speed copy machine, 4 work tables, several lockers (capable of being locked), and internal mobile telephones. The computers had high-speed Internet access.
• Two small conference rooms were located next to the ancillary meeting office which were used for meetings of small groups.
• Logistics were coordinated by the UN Office in Vienna’s who helped ensure that all equipment and facilities needed for ancillary meetings were accessible and UNODC’s IT specialists helped with internet and computer issues.

Ancillary Meeting Registration

Registration for participants of the ancillary meetings was coordinated by UNODC. Due to the restrictions placed on those who were allowed to enter Japan and the nature of the Congress web platform, the number permitted to register for the Congress was limited. The process was also complicated and, for many, cumbersome. Several people who would have liked to attend either in person or via the internet were not able to do so. UNODC staff worked hard to help all who wanted to register, but technical and bureaucratic processes were a major issue up to and during the Congress.

Finances

• Other than full-time staff of the United Nations, no individual working on the ancillary meetings received compensation for their work.
• Total expenses for the 2½ year ancillary meeting participation was $264,996.28. The original budget was for $300,000. Though some budget category amounts changed due to changes in the operations caused by Covid-19, overall expenses were less than initially anticipated.
• The use of the venue (Kyoto International Convention Center), meeting and office rooms, equipment, internet and supplies was provided without charge to the ancillary meeting by the agreement between the United Nations and the Japan Ministry of Justice.
• The budget was covered by the Japanese Ministry of Justice, working through a contract with the Japanese-based Convention Corporation. Financial documentation was provided to the Convention Corporation. In-kind services were provided by the Contact Center, Inc. and CEGA Services and discounted data processing costs were provided by Phoenix Webgroup.
• $234,561.53 of the expenses were paid by Contact Center, Inc. (a U.S.-based not-for-profit organization) and reimbursed. $30,434.75 of the expenses were paid to Japanese vendors directly by the Convention Corporation.

Budget Notes:
1. Thought the number of actual flights were greatly decreased, many tickets were purchased prior to the Covid-19 restrictions. All flight tickets were purchased at the lowest available fare. Thus, some airlines did not reimburse for cancelled flights and most charged a change fee.
2. The project lasted 11 months longer than the original budget anticipated. This category also includes some data processing equipment needed for the move to the online meetings.
3. The use of the United Nations Congress platform necessitated additional programming not included in the initial budget.
4. Expenses paid in Japan by the Convention Corporation were: Housing $24,402.92, Food $1,547.09, Covid Tests $4,297.25, Local Transportation $187.49.

Statistics

Prior to changes in the Congress format due to the pandemic, nearly 300 ancillary meetings were scheduled. After the Congress dates were changed and due to travel restrictions from many nations – both going to Japan and returning from Japan – several meetings were canceled. During the Congress there were 150 ancillary meetings. Below is a breakdown of 121 sessions for which we have reports:

- 45 criminal justice subjects were highlighted.
- All of the 17 United Nations Sustainable Development Goals were covered.
- Nearly 100 different organizations were involved in the organization of the ancillary meetings.
- Close to 500 separate individuals participated on panels or made presentations.
- According to the United Nations estimates, more than 5,000 individuals participated in the Congress.
- Most of the sessions were recorded and an unknown number of individuals viewed some of the ancillary meetings at a later date. Those, whose recordings we captured, will continue to be available on the www.un-congress.org website.
- 168 publications from the ancillary meetings are available at www.un-congress.org and are catalogued by title, organization/author and topic.
- The Government of Japan (Ministry of Justice and National Police Agency) held 20 Ancillary Meetings in a hybrid format of in-person participation and online participation. There were a total of 3,406 online participants (1,911 live, 1,495 on demand) in those meetings (these numbers are not included in *). The record of number of in-person participants does not exist, but there were many in-person participants in a room whose capacity was 50 persons.
Most of the following sessions were recorded and are available via the www.un-congress.org website. The titles of the meetings below also serve as a link to a full explanation of the meeting and the link to its recording. Unfortunately, due to technical errors and errors we committed, some of the session recordings are not available. As of the date of this report, 28 recordings are not available, and 5 recordings are only partially available. We continue to work to obtain full copies of all the recordings.

LESSONS LEARNED

The following “lessons learned” are derived from a combination of the information contained in this report and from reviewing material from the United Nations Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice held in Milan, Italy (1985), Havana, Cuba (1990), Cairo, Egypt (1995), Vienna, Austria (2000), Bangkok, Thailand (2005), Salvador, Brazil (2010) and Doha, Qatar (2015) for which I have had the pleasure of coordinating the ancillary meeting activities.

Note: For purposes of the following, NGO Coordinator refers to the non-UN Staff person and UN-staff person refers to the individual assigned by the UN to handle the NGO activities during the Congress.

Organization

Lesson Learned: The NGO Coordinator should begin work three years prior to the Congress.

Explanation: Even though the site of the Congress may not be confirmed at that time, it is important that the NGO coordinator begin attending UN Crime Commission Meetings; visit with UN staff and, as soon as possible, members of the host-government coordinating committee. This advance work allows for the definition of roles, duties and responsibilities between the parties and enhances coordination and cooperation. It also allows members of the NGO community to become familiar with the NGO coordinator and to begin their planning for activities and ancillary meetings they may wish to host.

Lesson Learned: The UN Secretariat in Vienna should establish a position to work with the NGO coordinator as soon as work on the Congress begins.

Explanation: This is not suggesting a person to work full time in this capacity; rather a job duty assigned to a specific individual. The UN Chain of Command and staffing changes with relative frequency. There should be one major point of contact within the UN Secretariat assigned to communicate with the NGO coordinator in order to avoid confusion. It is natural for the NGO coordinator to visit with a variety of people on the UN staff about Congress arrangements – even three years in advance of the Congress. In order to ensure that the conversations held result in coordinated and accepted activities, there should be one UN staff person who is responsible to record the decisions and make sure appropriate UN personnel are informed. It is realized in this recommendation that the UN Secretariat is not able to identify the person who may ultimately be in charge of working with the NGOs during the Congress three years in advance of the Congress. Therefore, the UN staff person assigned to work with the NGO coordinator may change over time. However, the notes and records that person keeps should be passed on to their successor. It is recommended that in making this assignment the UN Secretariat strongly consider the person who is normally responsible for keeping the list of NGOs up to date.

Lesson Learned: The NGO coordinator should be invited to attend UN Secretariat Congress and host country planning meetings and should be considered part of the Congress planning team.

Explanation: Not only is it important for the NGO coordinator to know what plans the UN Secretariat is making in order to answer questions from the NGO community and to have sufficient information to make plans for NGO participation, but the UN Secretariat planners and host government team can benefit from input as to NGO needs and plans. The large number of NGO representatives and individual experts requires that the NGO coordinator have a working relationship with various members of the UN Secretariat and host nation staff including those responsible for conference services, security and data processing.

Lesson Learned: A Web site should be established by the NGO coordinator no less than two years prior to the Congress to inform NGOs and potential participants of plans and to provide up-to-date information. The Web site should be updated weekly.
The Congress and, on some occasions, changes in the schedule may take place. A schedule of time slots and available rooms should be established no later than one month about by the Covid-19. Specific times and dates for ancillary meetings should not be assigned until the last minute. Of some organizations, it must be noted that changes in speakers and proposed times and dates may change at the last minute. It must also be taken into consideration that due to the sorting criteria and various priorities, changes in the schedule will take place relative close to the opening of the Congress and, on some occasions, changes in the schedule may take place during the Congress.

Explanation: The Web site should be unique to the ancillary meetings, with special sections on the Congress. Even though the UN and host nation will have their own Web sites, they must wait until plans have been given official approval before they can display their information. The planning process for many NGOs is very fluid and the more information, even general and speculative information, they have in advance the better for them. The NGO Web site can put information on and stress its draft or preliminary nature. The NGO Web site can also list plans of NGOs, especially those who might want to host ancillary meetings so others can ask to join with them.

The ancillary meeting website should clearly be identified as non-official in terms of the United Nations and host nation but should include information on the official functions as well as the ancillary meetings. The ancillary meeting website must be able to sort by a variety of criteria in order to reduce conflicts with official activities and participants. In order to do this the ancillary meeting should be able to list information from the official workshops, specialized (high level) meetings, plenary and committee I and II sessions. The sort used for establishing ancillary meetings should include information on all speakers, supporting organizations, subjects, UN Sustainable Goals (or related categories important to current UN work), times and dates of the sessions, etc.

As much as possible the ancillary meeting sort should help ensure that no individual is scheduled for the same time and day in more than one meeting, that the subject covered comes before the topic is covered in the plenary, workshop or Committee I and II so the data from the ancillary meeting can be used in the official Congress deliberations. The sort should help ensure that the same topic/subject, organization are not scheduled at the same time so potential participants are not put in a position of having to choose between sessions they feel are important to them.

Most important, there should be coordination between the ancillary meeting website and the United Nations data processing in terms of programming so data needed by the United Nations Congress team can easily be transmitted to them.

Lesson Learned: The Congress registration process must be open to all well in advance of the Congress and user friendly.

Explanation: The registration process for the 14th Congress, due to the rapid changes brought about by the Covid-19, was difficult for many to navigate. In spite of very hard work and efforts by United Nations staff, many potential participants were not able to attend the Congress either online or in person. Future registration, much as it has been prior to the 14th Congress, should allow for all who wish to attend to be able to do so providing they meet security requirements.

Lesson Learned: The use of online and hybrid meetings need to be carefully reviewed and criteria/procedures established.

Explanation: The development of a single platform for the Congress was, for many reasons, a good choice. However, the particular platform had several drawbacks that need to be reviewed and corrected for future Congress use. The lack of ability, in a cost-effective manner, for full simultaneous interpretation was a major disadvantage for an international UN Congress. The technical requirements reduced the opportunity for individual meetings to bring in last minute speakers and to share moderator responsibilities. The recording system needs to be reviewed to help eliminate technical and human factor errors that resulted, at times, in sessions recordings being of poor quality or the meeting not being recorded or not fully recorded. Much of the online issues were caused by users not having sufficient technical knowledge or appropriate web platforms or bandwidth – thus, the Congress platform must be designed in such a way as to help overcome participant deficiencies as much as possible.

Ancillary Meetings

Lesson Learned: A schedule of time slots and available rooms should be established no later than one-year prior to the Congress. A chart of potential Ancillary Meetings should be placed on the ancillary meeting Congress Web site.

Explanation: The listing of potential meetings, even those that may not occur, is important to place before the NGO and United Nations community so that groups with similar ideas and interests can coordinate. The chart should also show what times and slots are available. However, specific times and dates for ancillary meetings should not be assigned until the sponsoring organization confirms that they will host their proposed meeting. This allows NGOs to confirm their speakers for specific times – some speakers need more than a year to clear their schedule and begin preparations to attend the Congress. Time slots should be assigned on a first-come-first-served basis. Because of the independent nature and often informal nature of some organizations, it must be noted that changes in speakers and proposed times and dates of sessions may change at the last minute. It must also be taken into consideration that due to the sorting criteria and various priorities, changes in the schedule will take place relative close to the opening of the Congress and, on some occasions, changes in the schedule may take place during the Congress.
Lesson Learned: No less than 6, but preferably 8 rooms should be established for ancillary meetings. The rooms should be equipped with interpretation booths, audio-visual equipment for presentations and should be able to seat between 100 and 150 individuals. The rooms should be available from the second day of the Congress to the day before the end of the Congress. If online or hybrid meetings are anticipated, appropriate camera and sound equipment must be made available – that includes the ability for online interpretation.

Explanation: The expansion of the popularity of ancillary meetings calls for 15-20 meetings each day of the Congress, with the exception of the first day and the last day. Most organizers find that 1 ½ hours is an ideal amount of time for each session. It has become important that all sessions have the possibility of interpretation, so rooms should be equipped for that possibility. For ancillary meetings it has been generally found that 3 interpretation booths are adequate. Currently, English, Spanish and French are the most used languages. However, if a large number of participants from the host nation are expected, a fourth booth should be added. If the location of the Congress is in an area where Chinese or Arabic-speaking participants might be a large part of the audience then additional booths would be required. Currently, video projectors are very common for presentations so all the rooms should be equipped to accommodate this. It is important that the decision on the number of rooms, equipment and availability of interpretation equipment be made during the initial negotiations between the UN and the host country so the ancillary meeting coordinator will know what will be available and the cost implications.

Lesson Learned: In addition to the regular ancillary meeting format used by most NGOs, specialized training sessions should also be encouraged.

Explanation: During the Bangkok and Salvador Congresses, in addition to the Institute-sponsored Workshops and the NGO ancillary meetings, a highly technical and detailed three-to-four-day cybercrime training session was conducted by UNODC and Microsoft. The opportunity for criminal justice practitioners to receive the training, interact with other experts and to be part of the world’s major meeting on criminal justice provides a unique opportunity for learning, cooperation and network building. One of the potential advantages of the UN Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice is to allow for such opportunities.

Lesson Learned: Only UN-sponsored ancillary meetings and workshops should occur at the Congress.

Explanation: During the 14th and the Salvador Congress, the host government conducted an independent conference intended, in most cases, only for delegates of their nation. At times, this strained the resources originally made available for the UN ancillary meeting community and when conflicts arose exacerbated what appeared to be favoritism toward the host.

Lesson Learned: Those hosting ancillary meetings should be encouraged to print flyers and to publicize their session.

Explanation: Attendance at meetings was directly related to the amount of publicity the session host gave their session. Though there were some exceptions, usually those who produced flyers and displayed notices throughout the conference center or publicized their event online received the larger audiences.

Lesson Learned: Ancillary meeting hosts should encourage their participants to provide copies of their papers and/or PowerPoint presentations early.

Explanation: Having the papers early allows the ancillary meeting coordinator to provide copies to the interpreters and rapporteurs. It also could lend itself to the production of a booklet containing many of the presentations. That booklet could be made available electronically to the participants during and immediately after the Congress.

General

Lesson Learned: Exhibits should be a major part of the United Nations Congress on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice and should be controlled and coordinated by the ancillary meeting coordinator.

Explanation: The combination of NGO, non-profit, government and commercial exhibits provides delegates a rare opportunity to view criminal justice products and services in an environment where they can talk to the exhibitors and also visit with individuals from other nations who may have had experience with the vendor, product or service. The field of criminal justice is filled with constantly changing technology, philosophy and programs. Both government representatives and practitioners need an opportunity to see what is available. In most Congresses, the exhibits were organized by the ancillary meeting coordinator and were truly international. In Japan and Brazil, the exhibits were controlled by the host government and were dominated by national vendors and organizations, making the Congress exhibits more about a single nation than the world community.

Lesson Learned: There should continue to be United Nations Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice.

Explanation: During the Salvador Congress, several representatives of NGOs and individual experts discussed the cost-benefit of the United Nations Crime Congress. The unanimous conclusion was that the Congresses are both important and productive. Realizing that the Congress is expensive to the United Nations, the host nation and the nations which attend, the discussions centered on the cost-effectiveness of such meetings. Most of the NGO representatives and individual experts pointed out that they cover their own costs. The NGOs also cover a large part of the costs of the services they require (i.e. interpretation, etc.). With this in mind, those participating in the discussions felt their personal investments and those of their organizations and governments in the Congresses on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice were valuable (in excess of the costs to hold them) because:

1. Regardless of the final declaration to come out of any Congress, the discussions that take place at the preparatory meetings and the Crime Commission help mold the criminal justice debate and add to needed research.
2. The focus the Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Congress brings to the issues of human rights and criminal justice enhances the ability of individual nations and NGOs to work on those issues.
3. The large gathering of politicians and practitioners from the governmental and non-governmental world provides a unique opportunity for interchange and networking that does not exist in any other forum.
4. The opportunity for academics, practitioners, institutes, organizations and government representatives to present new data or to discuss issues with people from various philosophies, regions of the world, with vastly different economic and political realities is in itself an important activity and one desperately needed in a world where crime is increasingly sophisticated and something that is not likely to happen on such a large scale and/or in a neutral arena without the Congress.

JOINT STATEMENT ON BEHALF OF NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

Alliance of NGOs on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice

President, Excellencies, Delegates,

The Alliance of NGOs on Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice is honoured by the invitation to address the 14th Crime Congress with this joint statement prepared on behalf of the NGO community. Civil society includes a wide range of stakeholders and has a special place in the history, tradition and mandate of the Congress, which is a forum for exchange of ideas and experiences, rather than a policy-making body.

In preparation for the Congress, the Alliance asked civil society through a survey to indicate their needs, priorities and expectations. Despite the diverse nature and interests of the NGOs surveyed, there was agreement about the continued challenges to effective crime prevention and fairness of the system, and how COVID-19 represents an additional stressor. The pandemic generates effects on criminal markets, and places additional pressure on criminal justice systems. As an international community we believe in a whole-of-society approach to overcome such challenges and we encourage effective monitoring of crime trends, fairness of criminal justice systems, and impact of programmes and policies.

NGOs confirmed that crime prevention, gender sensitive policies, trafficking in persons, victims rights and optimal care, and an explicit desire to match policy making with scientific evidence are of utmost importance. In addition, is the need to effectively address corruption, domestic violence, violence against women, femicide, issues related to children and youth, prisons reform, organized crime, terrorism, and cybercrime.

We look forward to rich and effective involvement of civil society in implementing the Kyoto Declaration, and in preparations for the next Crime Congress. Finally, we strive for increased opportunities for access and meaningful participation of civil society in all relevant processes. Specifically, civil society should be more engaged in the development of political declarations and programmes of action, and in the review mechanisms of international conventions.

We reiterate our appreciation to the Host Country and the Secretariat for facilitating the participation of civil society in this special occasion, to ensure that our contribution to the UN Congress will be maintained and enhanced in line with tradition. This is even more important today that the prevention of crime and strengthening criminal justice institutions feature prominently among the goals of the 2030 Agenda. We look forward to a very dynamic Congress, with a rich programme of Ancillary Meetings, in which we hope there will be large participation, even in the hybrid format.
