5. Conceptual and practical challenges

The gender perspective:

6. Children and teenagers in the criminal justice system

- Forms and impacts of violence are differentiated for young men and women
- Participation in criminal dynamics is differentiated by gender
- The accused youths have a double condition of victims and perpetrators

- Restorative juvenile justice
- “Fénix” project

7. Proposals for addressing children and adolescents in contact with the criminal justice system

Understanding and valuing the chain of victimizations that precedes the commission of offenses by young people;

Strengthening the spaces for tertiary prevention,

Follow-up and accompaniment inside and outside attention centers for Young people deprived or their freedom;

Generating spaces for transition for Young people who come from families associated with crime and youth “children under state custody”

Provide attractive and competitive reintegration alternatives.
