

Martin Zapata is Academic Programmes Senior Officer at IACA. He is an anti-corruption professional and academic with extensive experience working as an expert and consultant for international Organizations, such as the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, Inter-American Development Bank, Japan International Cooperation Agency, Anticorruption Center - UDESA, and the Bolivian Ministry for Anti-Corruption, where he also served as Director-General of Ethics, and Transparency. Until recently he was the Regional Coordinator for Latin America of the Fisheries Transparency Initiative, leading projects in countries in the region to prevent malpractices, and especially corruption, that undermine the sustainable management of fisheries resources. Martin has collaborated and lectured at academic institutions in Argentina, Austria, Bolivia and Germany.