

Mythri Jayaraman is the Legal Advocacy Advisor for the International Legal Foundation. She currently leads advocacy for the ILF at the international level on the right to legal aid, including the development of data driven evidence on the impact of legal aid on people-centered justice. She also leads efforts at the ILF to assist legal aid providers around the world to address discrimination and inequality in criminal justice systems through litigation, training, policy advocacy, and public education. Prior to joining the ILF, Mythri spent nearly 20 years as a public defender in the United States, representing individuals in both state and federal courts, and developing particular expertise in forensic science evidence. As an expert in the field of indigent criminal defense, she has conducted trainings on forensic chemistry, early pretrial litigation, and appellate advocacy, and has mentored and trained ILF legal aid lawyers around the world to fight for the rights of those most marginalized, so that the idea of equal access to justice can become a reality.
