

Dr Lenita Törning is a senior researcher at the Swedish Centre for Preventing Violent Extremism (CVE). She has several years of experience developing the preventive work against violent extremism and terrorism at the local, regional and national level in Sweden, focusing particularly on the role of multi-agency collaboration and understanding new forms of violent extremism. She has also been part in developing two support models for first responders on how to prevent and respond to concerns about violent extremism.