

Tamara Anderson is the Chief of the Knowledge Management and Strategic Support Section for the Policy, Knowledge Management and Coordination Branch of the UN Office of Counter-Terrorism. Ms. Anderson has over 20 years of experience in security and counter-terrorism at the national and international levels in operational, analysis, policy and management roles. She has worked for the Australian Attorney-General's Department, the International Criminal Court, and held various roles with the UN including UN Department of Safety and Security, UNDP and the UN Office of Counter-Terrorism in Indonesia, Pakistan, Jordan and New York. Ms. Anderson holds Bachelors of Arts and Asian Studies (Indonesian) from the Australian National University, an LLM in International Human Rights Law from University College London and a Graduate Diploma in Management from Melbourne Business School.