The Rome Consensus 2.0 was launched at the 63rd CND as a multi-partner initiative to promote humanitarian drug policies. The statement since then has been signed by almost 100 organisations and hundreds of people from around the world.

The session will further develop the issues addressed in the Manifesto, especially on how both programmes and politics can and must overcome the false dichotomies between harm reduction, prevention, treatment and recovery.

Best practices from the field will also show the crucial role of community health workers and volunteers in humanitarian assistance by tackling drug disorders with a health-centered approach, by reducing the harm and stigma at community level, and facilitating the access to treatment.
