

Dr Penny Hill is the coordinator of the Australian Civil Society Committee on UN Drug Policy. She is a Board member of Harm Reduction Australia, Harm Reduction Victoria, and the Vienna NGO Committee. Penny currently works as the Emerging Drugs Research Fellow at the National Centre of Clinical Research in Emerging Drugs in Australia, working to develop a health-focused early warning system for new and emerging drugs.

Harm Reduction Australia (HRA) is a national organisation for individuals across Australia to join together in their commitment to reducing the health, social and economic harms potentially associated with drug use. HRA takes a non-judgemental approach to drug use within society and recognises the key role people with current and past drug use experience must play in any effective drug policy solutions.
