1. Background of the assignment:

Wildlife and Forest Crime (WLFC) is a serious and growing problem. The Global Programme for Combating Wildlife and Forest Crime serves to deliver a range of technical assistance activities within several thematic areas towards achieving the key project objective of strengthening capacity to prevent and combat WLFC on a regional, national, and local basis. The programme aims to improve cooperation and the capacity of Member States to work, locally, nationally, and internationally, to prevent and combat WLFC and other forms of serious and organized crime.

In efforts to combat and prevent WLFC, UNODC is working to support Member States to address these challenges from the criminal justice perspective. UNODC has provided support ‘from the crime scene to court’, and prosecutors play a key role in this process, helping to trigger more successful court cases at national level, as well as promoting legal assistance amongst countries to ensure cooperation against transnational organized criminal groups.

South Africa is home to most of the world’s rhino populations, and corruption is a facilitator for rhino horn trafficking networks who identify enforcement gaps to exploit. South Africa is also impacted by the organized illicit abalone trade which garners high profits for transnational organized criminal networks, among other illicit trade in wildlife and natural resource products.

The Environmental Management Inspectorate (EMIs), designated in terms of the National Environmental Management Act, employed in the National Department of Forestry Fisheries and the Environment (DFFE) or in the provincial environment authorities, have the designation and mandate to enforce the national and specific environmental management acts and have received the mandate to investigate biodiversity crimes. The National Prosecution Authority (NPA) becomes involved in a case when the police hand over the docket to the prosecutor. The NPA has the responsibility of deciding whether the police have adequately investigated the case and presented enough evidence for the case to be heard in court.

In support of a holistic approach to criminal justice, other sectors must also be strengthened. Given the challenges of COVID, online solutions should be employed to provide compliance and enforcement trainings.
