<sup>1</sup> In July 2022, the secretariat sent out note verbale CU 2022/264(A)/DTA/CEB/CSS inviting States parties to provide information on good practices and challenges concerning international cooperation to further prevent, identify, investigate and prosecute corruption during times of emergencies and crisis response and recovery, in line with paragraphs 22 and 23 of resolution 9/1 entitled “Sharm el-Sheikh declaration on strengthening international cooperation in the prevention of and fight against corruption during times of emergencies and crisis response and recovery”. As at 11 October 2022, the secretariat had received responses from 23 States parties, which were analysed in a note prepared by the secretariat, entitled “Best practices and challenges concerning international cooperation in combating corruption during times of emergencies and crisis response and recovery, and efforts to further explore and enhance knowledge of the links between corruption and other forms of crime” [CAC/COSP/EG.1/2022/CRP.1]. Responses were received from the following States parties: Australia, Bahrain, Belarus, Brazil, Bulgaria, Chad, Chile, Egypt, El Salvador, European Union, France, Georgia, Italy, Mexico, Myanmar, Panama, Portugal, Republic of Moldova, Romania, Saudi Arabia, Spain, Türkiye and the United States of America.

Questionnaire

Corruption may contribute to impunity for other types of crime by providing the leverage to facilitate and execute them, and to make them invisible, and often exacerbates those crimes through the involvement of powerful elites and individuals. Corrupt behaviour (such as violating duties, accepting or transferring bribes, and facilitating transactions, as well as ignoring or failing to follow-up on information that a crime may be taking place) may serve an enabler of other crimes by allowing for the enrichment of criminals and incentivizing individuals in the public and private sector to facilitate their operation. Other crimes can therefore flourish and in turn provide a basis for a wide range of corrupt behaviour.

This questionnaire is structured into two parts: Part 1 considers steps taken to understand the links between corruption and other forms of crime, while Part 2 focuses on the measures aimed at responding to corruption linked with other forms of crime.

I. Understanding the links between corruption and other forms of crime

1. Has your country undertaken any analyses or assessments to better understand the interlinkages between corruption and other forms of crime, including typologies of crime and how corruption may be used to facilitate and enable organized crime, economic and other crime, and vice versa? YES.
  - a. If YES, was such analysis carried out through formal risk assessments or other methods? Please describe.
Analyses and typologies of various form of corruption are being conducted on regular basis by the Department For Organized Crime and Corruption of the National Prosecutor's Office as a part of co-ordination of investigations involving corruption.
Corruption is also considered by the Polish National Risk Assessment of Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing as one of threats identified domestically and a predicate crime generating benefits subject to further laundering activities.
2. Please list the main typologies of other crime that have interlinkages with corruption in your country.
  - Drug trafficking
  - Money-laundering
  - Human trafficking
  - Migrant smuggling
  - Firearms trafficking
  - Crimes that affect the environment
  - Trafficking in cultural property
  - Cybercrime

Terrorism

Other forms of economic crime, organized crime or other crime with links to corruption (please list)

3. Please provide examples of corruption linked to these other crimes.

Please elaborate if you have or had any cases of the following in your country:

A. Corruption as an enabler of crime

- a. Cases of public officials abusing their office to facilitate criminal activity or to protect certain criminal individuals and entities – or to gain support from them – for example, by providing funding or protection or to gain and control public resources?

Criminal investigations meeting the foregoing criteria have been conducted by the Polish prosecution service. Most often they involved corrupted police officers accepting financial benefits for providing data from police information databases or for abandoning official activities, which in turn facilitated criminal activity. The corruption in judiciary is generally uncommon however a number of corruption investigations have been carried out so far and addressed acceptance of benefits for either favourable procedural decisions or for failure to undertake obligatory actions.

- b. Cases of corruption being used to facilitate other types of crime, such as trafficking in persons, illicit trade or smuggling of drugs across borders? For example, have any cases involved the following:

- the issuance of permits, licenses, visas or documents for border crossings
- the purchasing of firearms
- bribery of border agents
- falsification of data in public registries
- other

- c. Cases of corruption in public procurement to advance the interests of public officials and their associates? Cases of officials giving preferred access to contracts and tenders to their associates in cases involving other crimes?

Although corruption has been detected in relation to public procurement, it has not been identified in cases involving other crimes. Most often corruption occurs in public procurements in healthcare sector on the occasion of purchase of medical equipment and pharmaceutical products as well as in sectors of construction works, transport and defence.

- d. Cases of the protection of victims of crime and corruption being impeded by corruption involving public officials or persons in the private sector?

So far, no examples of such corruption has been investigated.

B. Corruption and crime linked to political patronage

- a. Criminal individuals and entities attempting to use corruption to obtain access to political leadership or to gain power and influence, such as through:

- political party financing
- trading in influence
- other

- b. Cases of crime and corruption being used to attempt to influence or disrupt elections?

The Polish prosecution service has conducted investigations into corruption aimed at disruption of elections. The investigations concerned giving of bribes to voters in local constituencies in return for voting for candidates in municipal elections. To date, no corruption has been detected in respect of general election to the parliament.

- c. Cases of criminal involvement, including through the use of corruption, to attempt to influence appointments of public officials to build dependency?

Criminal involvement in appointments of public officials has been investigated by the prosecution service of Poland, however such involvement was limited only to corruption and did not involve criminal activities of different kind.

C. Corruption to make organized and other crime invisible

- a. Cases of criminals and their associates using proceeds of crime and corruption for personal enrichment and to conceal the origin of the crimes and for money-laundering? In particular, cases of concealment of ownership being used to facilitate corruption and other forms of crime?

Concealment of ownership of proceeds of any crime, including corruption, is concerned as money laundering offence in Poland. In this context corruption plays a role of a predicate crime which generates illicit benefits. Then, concealment of ownership does not facilitate corruption as such. It is rather a type of modus operandi applied by money launderers.

- b. Cases of corruption being used to impede investigations, prosecutions and adjudications of organized and other crime, such as through bribery or allocation of political and other favors to law enforcement and judicial officers? Are there cases of corruption linked to organized and other crime not being pursued by the authorities ('blind eye')?

No such cases have been reported so far. Corruption linked to organized crime has been several times detected as a factor impeding investigations. It has not resulted however in crimes not being pursued. The corruptive practices usually targeted law enforcement officers in order to share with the criminals the findings of investigations and plans of future investigative actions to be taken.

- c. Cases of individuals and entities using corruption and other crimes to generate the funds needed to buy protection from the police? Cases of corruption in law enforcement authorities used to shield organized crime?

Please see the answer put forward in section b

- d. Cases of law enforcement being impeded due to a lack of information and data, as well as reporting of crimes related to corruption?

No such cases have been reported so far.

4. Has your country collected data or statistics to track and/or analyze trends related to the links between corruption and the types of crime outlined in Question 2 above?

Only to some extent.

- a. Are these data analysed and used systematically, such as in prevention and investigations or prosecutions? YES
- b. Please describe any methodologies used for strengthening measurement and terminological clarity, and achieving a deeper understanding of the different contexts (e.g. in times of peace or in emergencies or conflict situations) and sectors (e.g. law enforcement, border crossing, immigration, intelligence and security, procurement), as well as any corruption or organized crime threat assessments that take into account the interlinkages between corruption and other forms of crime.

Since 2016 the Department for Organized Crime and Corruption of the National Prosecution Office has been carrying out co-ordination of investigations into corruption at all levels of public and municipal administration, judiciary and law enforcement. Under auspices of co-ordination, all the units of prosecution service provide report to the National Prosecution Office on the on-going investigations and results thereof. Every year, the Department for Organized Crime and Corruption, based on the reports provided, drafts an annual report on investigating and prosecuting corruption in Poland. The reports outline inter alia the up-to-date assessments of corruption risk and the current typologies of corruption.
