Administrative Sanctions and Innovative Measures Against Corruption

Tuesday, December 17 @ 9 am
Conference Room 6

Starting from the premise that reliance on criminal prosecutions is not enough to effectively fight corruption, this session will discuss alternative avenues and innovative mechanisms that can be used with great efficiency while still creating huge disincentives for engaging in corruption. The panel will discuss the anti-corruption administrative systems developed by the major multilateral development banks over the past two decades, the more recently established sanctions system of Petrobras – one of the world’s largest state-owned enterprises, and the unique anti-corruption system of the Council of Ethics for the Norwegian Government Pension Fund. The panelists will highlight how each of these systems interact with national authorities, engage with private sector, and to what extent these types of systems can be replicated and adapted to other organizations across the public and private sectors.

Moderator: Alexandra Manea, Office of Suspension and Debarment, World Bank

Panelists:
- Alan Bacarese, Director, Integrity and Anti-Corruption, African Development Bank
- Adriana Dantas, Member of Independent Board Committee on Sanctions, Petrobras
- Kjell Dørum, Chief Advisor, Council on Ethics, Norwegian Government Pension Fund
