

I - Information requested from States parties in relation to mandates of anti-corruption body or bodies in respect of prevention (art.6)

1. Please describe the measures you have taken to implement art. 6 of the Convention.

A. Overview of the ACRC

The Anti-Corruption and Civil Rights Commission of Korea is the national anti-corruption body, which is the control tower of anti-corruption policy for the central and local governments, and public organizations.

- History

In response to the international anti-corruption movement in the mid-1990's including the OECD Anti-Bribery Convention and the 1997 Asian Financial Crisis, a social movement started in Korea to advance the overall social system including government practices. Civil society and the academia actively participated in the movement, in particular, to enact an anti-corruption act and to establish an independent anti-corruption body, leading to a lively discussion at the National Assembly of Korea. As a result, the "Anti-Corruption Act" was established in 2001 to effectively control corrupt practices, and the Korea Independent Commission Against Corruption (KICAC) was launched in the following year.

In line with this, the Korean government put the eradication of corruption and the enhancement of the national integrity level on the top government agenda and started working on systematizing its anti-corruption initiatives. These efforts were followed by an effective combination of preventive measures and reactive measures to address corruption, including government-wide anti-corruption policies, improvement of corruption-causing laws and systems, integrity assessment for public organizations, anti-corruption training, code of conduct for public officials on the prevention front, and handling of corruption reports, protection and reward for whistleblowers on the reaction front.

To lay the groundwork for a more effective governance, the ACRC was established in 2008 by integrating three functions of Ombudsman, administrative appeals, and corruption prevention. By integrating diverse channels to protect people's rights and interests, people can enjoy improved accessibility and efficiency of the one-stop complaint-filing channel. And given that corruption, complaints and administrative appeals cases are usually caused by the illegal or unfair performance of duties by public officials, the integration of the three functions has brought a huge synergistic effect between protecting people's rights and preventing corruption.

- Organization

The ACRC consists of the Chairperson (Ministerial level), three Vice Chairpersons (Vice Ministerial level), three Standing Commissioners and eight Non-Standing Commissioners.¹⁾ The Chairperson and Vice Chairpersons are appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Prime Minister. Standing Commissioners are appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Chairperson, and Non-Standing Commissioners are appointed or commissioned by the President. The Commission is guaranteed independence in performing its functions, and no member including the Chairperson shall be dismissed or discommissioned against his/her will.²⁾ For the fair decision-making by the ACRC, three non-standing commissioners are appointed or commissioned by the National Assembly, and other three on the recommendation of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Korea among the eight non-standing commissioners.

The Secretariat, which supports the operation of the Commission, consists of a total of 572 staffs. Every year, the Commission recruits around ten public officials who passed the Public Official Recruitment Exam for 5th and 7th grade officials.³⁾ As of April 2014, 55 experts are working at the ACRC including 21 lawyers, a licensed customs agent and a tax accountant, and 77 public officials seconded from various government ministries including 6 officials from the Ministry of Justice, 6 from the National Police Agency, 2 from the Prosecutors' Office, 2 from the Board of Audit and Inspection, and 2 from the National Tax Service.⁴⁾

Meanwhile, the annual budget of the ACRC was approximately USD 54 million (KRW 56.782 billion) in its first year (2008), and has increased every year to around USD 66.2 million (KRW 69.477 billion) in this year (2014), providing a stable and sufficient financial ground.

- ACRC Budget Trends -

USD(mil.)	54.0	55.3	57.9	58.4	62.5	65.4	66.2
KRW(bil.)	56.8	58.1	60.7	61.3	65.6	68.7	69.5

- Functions⁵⁾

The ACRC has mainly 4 functions: i) prevention of corruption; ii) complaints handling; iii) adjudication of administrative appeals; and iv) institutional improvement.

3) The grading system for public officials except political appointees in the Korean government ranged from 1st to 9th grades(the lower the number, the higher the position), and the Public Official Recruitment Exam is held every year to recruit 5th, 7th, and 9th grade officials.

4) Special treatment in personnel management is provided to seconded officials from other ministries to attract talented officials.

5) Refer to Article 12 of the ACRC Act in the Annex.

First of all, as a national anti-corruption agency, the ACRC formulates anti-corruption policies to be implemented at every level of government. The major anti-corruption policies conducted by the ACRC are: i) performing the Integrity Assessment and Anti-Corruption Initiatives Assessment; ii) analyzing and removing corruption-causing factors from the very stage of drafting laws and regulations; iii) receiving and handling reports on suspected corruption and public interest violation; iv) managing the Code of Conduct for Public Officials; v) offering protection and reward for reporters of corruption and public interest violation; vi) providing integrity training through the ACRC's Anti-Corruption Training Institute; and raising public awareness and promoting partnerships with civil society and international organizations against corruption.

In the meantime, individuals, companies, and any other legal entities who suffer illegal or unfair practices or dispositions by governmental agencies have two options to redress their difficulties aside from going to Court. First, they may file complaints with the ACRC on the practices or dispositions. The ACRC may recommend the agency involved to take corrective measures for the complainant, based on the result of investigation into the complaint. The second way is to file administrative appeals, instead of complaints, with the ACRC and in that case the ACRC may nullify the practices or dispositions or order the agency involved to take corrective measures. Since the agency involved is bound by the ACRC's decision on the administrative appeals case, the scope of subject matters for filing administrative appeals is narrower than those of filing complaints.

Last but not least, the ACRC makes a systematic effort to correct unreasonable laws and systems which trigger complaints and corruption beyond just addressing an individual complaint and corruption case.

- Participation in UNCAC meetings and implementation review process

In pursuant to Article 6 (3) of the Convention, the ACRC was designated and notified as Korea's national preventive anti-corruption body in April 2008, and has been deploying a delegation to all Conference of State Parties (CoSP) and Implementation Review Group (IRG) meetings that have been held so far. In particular, at the 3rd CoSP (Nov. 2009, Qatar), and the 5th CoSP (Nov. 2013, Panama), the ACRC Chairman attended the conference and gave a speech at the General Discussion session.

In the mean time, the ACRC submitted a report on the implementation status regarding whistleblower protection system and other measures that the ACRC is conducting in the third year of the first review cycle. In March 2013, a delegation consisting of anti-corruption experts from Bulgaria, India and the UNODC visited the ACRC and other related agencies in Korea for a country review and the Commission responded to the delegation with sincerity. In the Country Review Report, the ACRC was chosen as the "successful and best practice". As Korea's national preventive anti-corruption institution, the ACRC is expected to take the lead in the second review cycle which will monitor the implementation status of Chapter II (Preventive Measures) of the Convention.

B. Major preventive measures of the ACRC

- Guideline for anti-corruption and integrity policy implementation

The ACRC, which formulates anti-corruption strategies and policies at the national level, is establishing "Guideline for anti-corruption and integrity policy implementation" at the beginning of every year. The guideline is distributed to each public organization to provide information needed for them to conduct their own anti-corruption policy.

The ACRC holds annual meeting to convey this guideline to the inspectors of central government agencies, local governments, offices of education, and public service-related organizations so as to improve consistency and comprehensiveness of the national anti-corruption policy by sharing the future direction of nation-wide anti-corruption policy and putting forward issues and challenges of focus. In detail, the guideline for anti-corruption and integrity policy implementation includes assessment results at home and abroad on the national integrity level, analysis of anti-corruption policy environment, priorities in implementing government initiatives of that year, implementation status of each public organization and anti-corruption best practices of the previous year, etc.

- Integrity Assessment for Public Organizations

Since 2002, the Integrity Assessment on public organizations has been conducted every year. The purposes of conducting assessment of integrity levels of public organizations are: 1) to evaluate the integrity levels of public organizations at every level in an objective and scientific way; 2) to identify the corruption-prone areas of each specific organization; 3) to induce public organizations to voluntarily increase their integrity levels by making public the assessment results to the people; 4) and to raise awareness on fighting corruption not only in the public sector but also in the private sector.

The comprehensive integrity level is calculated by combining the external integrity level, internal integrity level, policy customers' evaluation, corruption statistics, and the results of trust-impeding behaviors. This is a comprehensive index that shows the integrity levels assessed from the perspectives of the people, internal officials, and policy customers and the degree of corruption cases and opened to the public every year.

- Anti-Corruption Initiatives Assessment

The ACRC performs the Anti-Corruption Initiatives Assessment to assess the appropriateness and effectiveness of the anti-corruption initiatives being implemented by each public organization. The fundamental objective of the Assessment is to spread best practices across the public sector as well as to induce public organizations to make an increased anti-corruption effort. In particular, the Commission is also pushing forward voluntary cooperation between organizations to spread the culture of anti-corruption and integrity.

The assessment is divided into 2 parts: 1) will and efforts for anti-corruption and 2) anti-corruption outcome. Under the 2 parts, the specific criteria are as follows. The first part evaluates i) establishment of anti-corruption infrastructure, ii) enhancement of policy transparency and confidence, iii) eradication and improvement of corruption-causing factors, iv) improvement of integrity awareness and culture in the public-service sector, and v) facilitation of corruption prevention and whistleblowing. The other part includes i) the degree of improved integrity levels, and ii) statistics of corrupt officials.

- Corruption Impact Assessment and Institutional Improvement

The Corruption Impact Assessment is a system to remove corruption-causing factors out of newly enacted/revised laws, administrative rules, autonomous regulations, and internal regulations of public service-related organizations. When public organizations enact or amend laws and regulations, they are required to prepare a draft and relevant materials and to request the ACRC to conduct the Corruption Impact Assessment on the draft, right after they start consultations with concerned agencies. The ACRC reviews and assesses corruption-causing factors of the draft based on 3 criteria (ease of compliance, propriety of discretion, and transparency of procedures) and recommends improvement measures and detailed examples of enactment so that they can reflect the recommendations into their draft before legislative examination.

In the meantime, the ACRC pushes forward institutional improvements to protect the rights of the people and to establish an atmosphere of integrity in the public sector and the whole society. Should the improvement of any relevant law, system, or policy recognized to be necessary in the course of investigating or handling a complaint, the ACRC may recommend or submit to the head of the concerned administrative agency the necessary improvement or opinion. For effective improvement of institutions or systems, the Commission requests the relevant materials, conducts fact-finding investigations, and reviews the compliance with made recommendations. Moreover, when deemed necessary, it can submit its opinions to the president or the National Assembly or disclose it to the media to secure the effectiveness of institutional improvements.

- Code of Conduct for Public Officials

The "Code of Conduct for Public Officials" is the standard of behavior to be observed by public officials to carry out public duties in a way that has integrity and to prevent corruption. This Code encompasses every nature of practical codes that define the specific standards and procedures members should follow.

The Code of Conduct was created for public officials for the first time in 2003 based on the “Anti-Corruption Act” which was enacted in 2001 and has been applied to the executives and employees of public service related organizations since 2006. Constitutional organizations (the National Assembly, the Supreme Court, the Constitutional Court and the National Election Commission) and local council have their own Code of Conduct.

The ACRC manages the system of the Code of Conduct in general, carries out policies to support the operation of each public organization, and executes the Code by handling violation reports of the Codes and inspecting the implementation status of public organizations. The Commission supports and manages the operation of the Code in central government agencies, local governments, local assemblies, offices of education, and public service-related organizations.

- Protection and Rewards for whistleblowers

The ACRC provides protection measures and rewards for whistleblowers who report corruption and/or public interest violation.

The whistleblower protection system is a legal method to encourage any person who becomes aware of an act of corruption or a violation of public interest to report it to the ACRC or the organization he/she belongs to. A whistleblower can receive protective measures such as guarantee of public position, protection of confidentiality and personal safety, and mitigation of culpability.

The rewards system is to provide financial incentive for whistleblowers when the report contributes directly to increasing or recovering revenues of a public organization or preventing it from bearing economic costs to be otherwise incurred. The system serves as an effective anti-corruption tool by encouraging people to participate in reporting illegal acts by rewarding an individual's courageous act for the public interest, despite a burden of risks.

- Anti-Corruption Education & Training

Korea has launched the Anti-Corruption Training Institution(ACTI) which is independent and professional anti-corruption education and training facility in October 2012. Major anti-corruption training courses of the ACTI are as follows:

- The Integrity Training Course

The ACTI is providing customized Integrity Training Courses by target, public duties, and life cycle of public officials. The training programs are composed of ““Participatory learning”” where public officials discuss the values and meaning of being a public official of integrity, and lectures on various themes to be used in the field. Online courses are also available. (<http://acti.coti.go.kr>)

- The Integrity Training for High-ranking Officials

The ACTI has also offered its Door-to-Door Integrity Training to high-ranking officials of various public agencies since 2009, to satisfy the high expectations of the people on the high level of ethics of high-ranking public officials and to make them play a leading role to successfully settle the culture of integrity in their respective organizations.

- Operation of the Integrity Education Research School

The ACTI designates the “Integrity Education Research School” and supports its efforts to provide students with integrity education programs. Designated elementary/ middle/high schools teach students about the value of integrity, provide customized integrity education for their students, and share the best practices of these schools with other schools.

3. Please outline actions required to strengthen or improve the measures described above and any specific challenges you might be facing in this respect.

Succeeding the Korea Independent Commission Against Corruption (KICAC), the ACRC was newly launched in 2008. The recognition rate for the ACRC among the general public stood at around 52.8% as of 2013.

The ACRC is making the following efforts to raise the public awareness of corruption and to improve effectiveness of anti-corruption policy by promoting and spreading the ACRC's activities.

- Press Reports and Policy Marketing

When an important policy issue occurs, the Chairman and high-ranking officials directly and actively hold media interviews and contribute to newspapers for the better understanding of the people. Recently, the ACRC is also focusing on foreign press reports. It is actively encouraging foreign press reports by providing the member reporters of the Seoul Foreign Correspondents' Club with its press releases in English and other materials such as the themes, presentations, and schedules of its international conferences in order to draw attention at home and abroad on Korea's anti-corruption and integrity policies.

- Promotion of Policies and Free Advertisement through Public Media

The ACRC have not only continued its promotions on traditional media, such as TV, radio, and newspaper, but also used various outdoor advertising media and internet banners for advertisement. The Commission is also making various efforts to find various promotion projects that do not need to use the allocated budget, including running a contest targeting ACRC officials for promotion ideas. In particular, the Commission effectively promotes its public whistleblower protection system and the Government Welfare Fraud Report Center, using public media such as government publications and about 300 electronic display boards owned by public agencies.

- Publication of the “ACRC Quarterly”

Since its launch in 2008, the ACRC has published a biennial magazine in order to share the Commission’s activities and newest updates. Up to April 2014, a total of 37 volumes have been produced since the release of the first issue in March 2008. Moreover, the English edition of the “ACRC Quarterly” has been published on a quarterly basis to be distributed to major official residences, foreign reporters, and foreign CEOs.

- Promotion Using New Media Sources Such as SNSs

Due to interesting and visual contents using latest techniques such as infographic and webtoons, as well as various events through SNS, the accumulated number of visitors to the ACRC blog has increased to 4.39 million, and the number of SNS policy customers has constantly increased to 128,000 as of April 2014.
