Global Access to Medicinal Cannabis: Programs, Challenges and Solutions

Most patients have trouble accessing medicinal cannabis around the world. However, there are some countries that have successfully implemented systems providing access to cannabis medicine. Despite continued stigma risen from a century of misinformation, cannabis, with minimal risk, provides benefits to patients not available from any other medications, and holds great promise as an adjunct to opiates potentially helping to reduce overdose.

This event will give an overview of the state of access to this ancient plant medicine around the world, highlight countries with successful programs that can serve as models for ensuring patients' access to cannabis products, and discuss the impact of the UN's decision to remove cannabis from the strictest international schedule.

Speakers: Dr. Pavel Pachta, Dr. Ethan Russo, Carola Perez, and Bryan Buckley.
